90th YEAR, No. 50 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1973 15 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

M-B PROFIT SOARS

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today reported net earnings of $50,774,962 or $2.43 a share for the first six months of 1973, 136 per cent higher than the $21,539,962 earned in the same period of 1972.

The company's sales and other income for the six months ending June 30 amounted to $605,931,600, compared with $445,566,200 for the first half of 1972.

In its report to shareholders, the company said the increase in net earnings arose principally from greatly improved markets for all the company's products, especially lumber and plywood; favorable movement of the Canadian dollar relative to the U.S. dollar and the decrease in corporate income tax liability by about $3,800,000 due to the reduction in corporate tax rate applied to income of Canadian manufacturing and processing operations.

Mortgages Reach 10%
As Bank Rate Hiked

Banks and trust companies began a new round of interest rate increases today with some firms raising their mortgage rates to 10 per cent.

The increases, which are expected to become general across Canada this week, follow an increase in the Bank of Canada's lending rate Monday night to 6.75 per cent from 6.25 per cent.

Banks today began raising their prime lending rate to large companies to 8.25 per cent from 7.75 per cent.

Conventional and National Housing Act mortgages were moving up to 10 per cent from 9.75 per cent.

There was pressure on the banks to raise their consumer loan interest rate to 12.5 per cent from 12 per cent, but there was no upward movement on these rates reported today.

One Victoria bank manager said it was customary to maintain a five per cent gap between prime loans and consumer loans.

"By that guide, the consumer rate should go to 13.25 per cent, but I expect it will rise only to about 12.5 per cent," he said.

Victoria bankers expressed concern that the federal government was about to step in and restrict the flow of money.

The supply was plentiful in Victoria and demand had been strong at the previous levels.

Several bankers said the tight money policies of 1969 could be only a matter of weeks away.

"Likely it would begin by the government directing banks to make as much money as possible available for mortgages and consumer loans and cut back on big loans to industry," a Victoria banker said.

"Then a general tight money policy would be not far behind."

The current round of rate increases were expected to be still below the peak.

Political opponents of the Trudeau government criticized the Bank of Canada's increase in interest rates today as "sad" and "disastrous," and a national consumers' spokesman said it will push rising living costs up even further.

"Very sad," said Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield. "The increase is going to move up rates on mortgages and make it more difficult for Canadians to get loans."

"I don't see how in heaven's name it can have any affect on reducing prices, certainly not food prices," said New Democrat Leader David Lewis.

"It seems as if the govern-

Gas Rips Homes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A series of violent explosions left at least six houses wrecked and 15 others on fire today when construction equipment ripped into a natural gas line in a subdivision in the city's west end.

Families were evacuated from the entire subdivision, an area about a mile square.

First reports were that three persons suffered minor injuries, but fire and police officials were uncertain of the exact injury toll.

Officials said the explosions began when a regulator valve on one street was ripped. Gas under high pressure was released into low pressure lines.

Within moments, the Richard B. Craig house blew up and two neighboring houses caught on fire.

Mrs. Robert Scott, whose house caught on fire, said she believed the Craig house was empty at the time of the explosion.

VIOLENCE RAKES CHILE

SANTIAGO (UPI) — A wave of terrorist violence swept Santiago and other sections of Chile today and the military took over law enforcement in the capital.

A gasoline pipeline was dynamited, homes and vehicles firebombed and rail tracks sabotaged in incidents linked to a series of walkouts that have crippled nationwide ground transportation for almost two weeks.

Wrong Target Again

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — U.S. warplanes in their second fatal bombing error in two days today hit a village little more than four miles from Neak Luong, the Mekong River town destroyed Monday by B-52s, Cambodian military sources said.

The U.S. embassy issued revised figures late today saying that 137 persons, including 56 soldiers, were killed in the Neak Luong bombing and another 268 persons, including 118 soldiers, were wounded. The Cambodians put the casualty toll higher.

The second bombing error came at the village of Koh Tachou, about 4.5 miles north of Neak Luong, and was carried out by F-111 swingwing fighter bombers. The Cambodians said four persons were killed and 25 wounded and that 17 houses were destroyed.

Meanwhile, in Washington, lawyers seeking a court order to make the U.S. immediately stop its bombing of Cambodia asked Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall Monday to reconsider his decision to let it continue.

RAIL UMPIRE NAMED

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today named Mr. Justice Alan Gold as an independent mediator in the dispute between the railways and their 56,000 non-operating workers.

Union leaders Monday announced a "second round" of rotating strikes — opening with a 42-hour walkout in Quebec — to continue "until we get a just settlement" after a fruitless attempt to resume negotiations.

Mr. Justice Gold is associate chief justice of the Quebec Superior Court in Montreal and an experienced labor mediator and arbitrator, especially in disputes involving longshoremen in the St. Lawrence River ports.

Munro told newsmen no deadline had been set for a settlement in the dispute before further action — including possible imposition of binding arbitration through emergency legislation by Parliament — was taken by the government. Nor had Mr. Justice Gold been given any specific instructions or ceilings on possible offers to the workers, Munro said.

Meanwhile, the second cycle of rotating strikes by non-operating railway employees resumed today with 18,000 workers walking out in Quebec province.

And, in Toronto about 60 employees at a CP Rail freight shed walked off the job protesting both union and company tactics during the rotating strikes.

Bob Copps, a spokesman for the workers, said they walked off the job halfway through their night shift because they feel the company is not seriously negotiating for a settlement.

Agnew Bribe Probe

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-president Spiro Agnew and two of his Maryland political associates are under federal investigation for possible violation of bribery, conspiracy and tax laws in connection with an alleged kickback scheme.

The investigation, sources said, involves alleged kickbacks to political figures in Baltimore county and other Maryland areas from engineering and architectural firms who have done business with the county.

Baltimore county surrounds Baltimore city on three sides and is where Agnew began his political career and the allegations apparently concern a period before Agnew became vice-president.

Agnew, late Monday, proclaimed his innocence. A statement issued by his office said:

"I have been informed that I am under investigation for possible violations of the criminal statutes. I will make no further comment until the investigation has been completed, other than to say that I am innocent of any wrongdoing, that I have confidence in the criminal justice system of the United States and that I am equally confident my innocence will be confirmed."

Other targets of the investigation, according to reliable sources, are two of Agnew's long-standing friends and important fund-raisers — J. Walter Jones, an Annapolis banker, and I. H. Hammerman, a Baltimore investment banker.

Hammerman and Jones served as Agnew fund-raisers when he ran for county executive in 1962 and for governor in 1966. Neither could be reached for comment Monday night.

Deputy presidential press secretary Gerald Warren said there would be no White House comment at this point.

Similarly, Attorney-General Elliot Richardson said through a spokesman Monday night that there would be no justice department comment at this time.

At the moment, specific details about the investigation are lacking.

But this much is clear: The second highest elected officer in the nation has joined the president under a cloud of suspicion. The investigation comes during the Watergate hearings and the consequent plummetting fortunes of the Republican party.

Agnew, who has frequently been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 1976, has thus far been untouched by the Watergate scandal. Now, however, his very acknowledgement that he is under investigation in another matter throws plans for 1976 out of kilter and the U.S. public has once again been treated to an overdose of the unexpected.

The investigation grew out of a federal grand jury probe which centred on Dale Anderson, one of Maryland's most powerful Democrats, who succeeded Agnew as Baltimore County Executive and still serves in the post.

Two months ago, William Fornoff, a former aide to both Agnew and Anderson, told the grand jury that since 1967 — when Anderson succeeded Agnew — he had funnelled cash kickbacks from several local contractors "to another official in Baltimore County."

Anderson publicly denied that he was the "other man" alluded to by Fornoff, but he later admitted at a closed-door meeting of his aides that he was under investigation by a federal grand jury.

During the seven-month investigation into Anderson's activities, several Baltimore County contractors have testified before the grand jury, and sources familiar with the probe have predicted that some contractors would be indicted.

One justice department source said Monday night that the legal immunity of an incumbent vice-president is not clear.

As an officer of the Senate, the source said, the vice-president enjoys certain constitutional immunities but it is not clear whether these immunities would cover crimes committed before becoming vice-president.

Nixon 'Dumbfounded'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon was "dumbfounded" when told in mid-April of this year that his closest aides had been accused in the Watergate case, former attorney-general Richard G. Kleindienst said today.

Kleindienst told the Senate Watergate committee he first learned of accusations by White House counsel John Dean and Jeb Stuart Magruder, former Nixon campaign deputy, early in the morning of April 15.

He said he immediately sought a meeting with Nixon, and relayed the information to him early that afternoon in Nixon's office.

"He was dumbfounded, he was very upset," Kleindienst said.

Kleindienst said he (Kleindienst) also reacted emotionally to the accusations.

"Two of those men (former White House aide Robert Mardian and former attorney-general John Mitchell) were the closest friends I have ever had in my life," he said. "I think one of the things I did that night was, I wept."

He said the affair saddened him more than anything since the death of his mother when he was a young boy.

He said Nixon consoled him in their meeting that afternoon, when Kleindienst laid out the charges.

Meanwhile, Nixon argued today that for him to give Watergate investigators tapes of his White House conversations on the scandal would cause "severe and irreparable" damage to the presidency.

He said he believed those guilty of criminal conduct could be brought to justice without the tapes, but that even if he were mistaken, the confidentiality of the presidency was more important.

The president's lawyers said in papers filed for Nixon in federal court that release of the tapes, as demanded by special Watergate prosecutor, Archibald Cox, would make the presidency subservient to the judicial branch of government.

The action came shortly after the Senate Watergate committee decided to postpone any legal action of its own to obtain tapes and related documents pending disclosure of Nixon's reply to the Cox subpoena.

The committee apparently decided to put off its lawsuit because of some concern that federal courts might refuse to accept the case on grounds that they lacked jurisdiction.

After Nixon's lawyers filed their opinion, U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica gave Cox until Monday, Aug. 13, to respond.

Loans For Poor

The British Columbia government may provide loans to low-income earners if the federal government does not move in this area before next spring, Premier Barrett said today.

Barrett, commenting on the fiscal policies of the federal government, said: "I am concerned about the high cost of money for low income people.

"This may be one area where the provincial government will move next spring."

Barrett said the provision of loans may require legislative action by the NDP government at next spring's session of the legislature. However, it could possibly be done entirely through budgetary provisions in the 1974 provincial budget, he said.

The premier would not elaborate.

NEW TAX AREAS

There will be no increases in corporate or personal income taxes when the British Columbia government brings in its budget next year, Premier Barrett said today.

However, he added, there will likely be new or increased taxation in other areas, possibly on the province's resources.

There will be no increase in personal income taxes "within the foreseeable future", he said, nor will the government be increasing business taxes "but we are looking at other areas."

Barrett made the comment at a news conference during which he defended his decision this year to increase corporate income tax to 12 per cent from 10 per cent because the province is currently going through a "boom year."

Don't Panic, B.C. Consumers Told

Don't panic.

That's the advice B.C.'s cabinet minister for consumer affairs, Phyllis Young, is giving meat buyers.

"It's fatuous to say pull in your belt, but just try to be judicious in purchasing," Young said today.

Panicking just drives prices up more, she said.

The crisis in meat prices is both a spill-over from the United States and the fault of the news media for "jumping on the situation."

"If the price increase is at the processor or the retailer level I just don't know and I don't know how to find out," she said.

The Prices Review Board in Ottawa should look into the industry, she said, and "if they find some hanky-panky" force the prices to go down.

"I've been keeping up with farm newspapers and I don't find the farmer getting any of this (price increase)," Young added.

The problem is definitely aggravated, she said, by a "freaky" weather situation all over the world and a series of circumstances causing shortages of feed.

Premier Barrett today urged consumers to boycott meat products until prices are lowered.

The premier said he agrees entirely with federal agriculture minister Eugene Whalen who, Barrett said, accused wholesalers of "gouging" public on meat sales.

"Don't buy meat," Barrett said. "That's the only way to do something about it."

Meanwhile the U.S. agriculture department today predicted grocery prices in the U.S. this year will average about 20 per cent above 1972.

If the increase over 1972 tops 21 per cent gain recorded in 1947, it would be the biggest one-year rise on record.

Department experts conceded that earlier hopes for a levelling off or decline in retail food prices in the last half of this year have now vanished and the best they can foresee for the rest of 1973 is a slower rate of increase than in the first half.

The Cost of Living Council announced today most of the administration's final Phase IV regulations and said firms will be able to raise some prices 10 per cent or more starting as early as next week.

BARRETT BANS BUGS AFTER WATERGATE

Premier Barrett said today he has ordered one of his cabinet ministers to discontinue the tape-recording of the minister's telephone conversations, in light of the Watergate scandal in the U.S.

Barrett said the minister, Trade Minister Gary Lauk, had been using a telephone answering device to record his conversations for memorandum purposes. Lauk always advised his callers that they were being taped, however, the premier said.

"I don't consider this a bad practice," Barrett said, "but under the circumstances existing in North America these days, we decided that he should discontinue this."

Canadians 'Murdered' By Zambia—Inquest

THE BETTER HALF By Barnes

"At this point, we should all give thanks that there's no sound track on this film."

WANKIE, Rhodesia (Reuter) — Two Canadian girls who died in a shooting incident at Victoria Falls in May were "murdered by the Zambian army," a magistrate ruled Monday.

The magistrate, R. S. McKay, said at the end of an inquest into the girls' deaths that he hopes those responsible will be brought to justice.

Marjan Drijber, 19, of Rockwood, Ont., and Christine Sinclair, 19, of Guelph, Ont., were fired on May 15 from the Zambian side of the gorge below the falls where they had gone with two American companions, Miss Drijber's body has not been found.

Regarding Miss Sinclair, McKay recorded a verdict of death by cerebral lacerations and a fractured skull "consistent with gunshot wounds."

He said the death of her friend was due to either drowning or bullet wounds.

"In both cases they were murdered by the Zambian army," he said.

The official Zambian explanation of their deaths was that a sentry fired on them while they were attempting to cross the Zambezi River in an apparent attack on the Livingstone power station.

Inspector Don Russell, the policeman in charge of the rescue of the two Americans, John and Carol Crothers of Troy, Ohio, told the hearing that it was impossible to swim in the river at the point where the shooting occurred.

He said that even with underwater equipment it would still have been impossible, as there is an extremely strong current.

'DON'T PANIC' OVER FOOD

said Tuesday some Toronto stores "inadvertently" raised the price of bacon over the weekend, contrary to company policy.

While customers watched, the price rose 30 cents at some stores as higher-price labels were stuck on packages already on the shelves.

Jim Williams said Dominion has told its 110 stores here to reinstate lower prices which stood at $1.38 a pound for bacon already in stock.

However, new orders of bacon will sell for as much as $1.68 for Burns Select bacon and $1.74 for Schneiders', said the spokesman for Dominion and an official of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd.

Meanwhile, a campaign to lower food prices in the U.S. by trying to break up big food industry conglomerates has been launched in Washington.

"If there had been more competition in just 13 food lines in 1972, consumers would have saved more than $2 billion at the supermarket," a spokesman said.

The campaign theme is "Send Washington a message," announced James Hightower, co-ordinator of the drive. "The message is simple: get off the dime and take action against concentration in the food industry."

NIXON DUMBFOUNDED

J. Fred Buzhardt asked for and was granted until Aug. 17 for any additional writtten reply. Sirica scheduled oral argument for Aug. 22.

Kleindienst also testified today that he warned White House aide John D. Ehrlichman last summer that he could be charged with obstructing justice for interfering with the grand jury investigation of the Watergate affair.

Kleindienst said he threatened to go to President Nixon if Ehrlichman persisted in trying to give direct orders to assistant attorney-general Henry Petersen, the career man at the justice department who is in charge of its criminal division and remains in over-all charge of the Watergate investigation.

Kleindienst told the senators that Ehrlichman, through Petersen, sought to prevent the questioning by U.S. prosecutors of Maurice Stans, who raised $50 million on Nixon's behalf as chairman of the finance committee to re-elect the president.

Kleindienst said Ehrlichman told him Petersen's reaction to the demand was to tell Ehrlichman "to go you know where."

"I said, 'John, you've got to be out of your mind'," Kleindienst testified. He said if Petersen had chosen to air Ehrlichman's request at a news conference or make it public some other way, Ehrlichman could be charged with obstructing justice.

Kleindienst said he told Ehrlichman never to try to deal directly with Petersen again.

But only when he threatened to carry the issue to Nixon did Ehrlichman stop arguing, Kleindienst said.

From the start, Kleindienst said, he sought to ward off special treatment for the Watergate defendants.

He said he considered their crime "heinous" since it interfered with the opposition political party and "went to the very heart of our political system."

Kleindienst said he learned of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters the day after from G. Gordon Liddy, later convicted as the operation's "mastermind."

He said Liddy and Powell Moore, a public relations aide for the Nixon campaign committee, sought him out on the golf course at the Burning Tree Country Club.

Kleindienst said Liddy told him then that some of the men arrested in the Watergate might be employed by the White House or the Nixon campaign committee.

"My reaction to that statement was instantaneious and rather abrupt," said Kleindienst.

He immediately called Petersen and told him in Liddy's presence that no special treatment should be given to the arrested men, he testified.

He said he immediately told Liddy and Moore to leave the premises.

In related developments:

The Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation has asked the Internal Revenue Service for tax returns and any IRS audits on more than 200 hitherto unpublished "political enemies" of the Nixon administration, to determine whether audits have been used punitively against them.

The administration disclosed Monday that the federal government has spent nearly $10 million for new construction, repairs, security installations and communications at the presidential retreats in California and Florida.

Presidential spokesman Gerald Warren announced that Nixon has hired a private auditing firm to prepare "a complete, detailed accounting of the acquisition of the homes and property" he has purchased since taking office.

between Congress and the President, said that impeachment of a vice-president is not a necessary prerequisite to indictment.

"(A case) can proceed to a criminal trial without impeachment. Also, a president cannot remove from office a vice-president, because the vice-president is an elected officer," Berger said.

If the office of vice-president is vacant, the 25th amendment provides that the president nominate a vice-president to take office only after confirmation by a majority vote of both houses of congress.

Saanich Eyes Summer Ban On Incinerator

Saanich may ban incinerator fires every afternoon between June and September instead of just on weekends.

The matter will come before the council's fire committee, likely before the end of the month.

Meanwhile, for the first time, the fire chief now has the authority to enforce regulations concerning incinerators.

MORTGAGE RATES NOW 10%

ment and the Bank of Canada are continuing their disastrous policy," he said.

"They have increased interest rates by two percentage points — an increase of about 50 per cent — in the past four months. It's a disastrous policy which I condemn without reservation."

"It will make it much more difficult for consumers to finance one of the biggest purchase of their lives — houses," commented Maryon Brechin, president of the 110,000-member Consumers Association of Canada.

Stanfield, at a news conference, repeated his party's demand for a 90-day freeze on prices and incomes to be followed by economic controls.

He said soaring food prices and the interest rate increase are part of Canada's worsening inflation that only controls can halt.

"It's very difficult to understand how ordinary Canadians are getting by," he said.

The prime bank rate in the United States is about 9 per cent, compared to the new Canadian rate of 8.25 per cent.

Some Victoria bankers predicted another increase in the Bank of Canada's 6.75 per cent lending rate within two weeks.

That would set off another round of rate increases which might be the peak.

Because of the demand-resistance pressures on rates, levels in recent years have followed a two-year cycle.

The prime bank rate (now 8.25 per cent) was at a low of 5.75 per cent in April, 1967, rising to a peak of 8.5 per cent in July, 1969.

Then it fell to a low of 6 per cent in November of 1971, suggesting a peak this year of 8.75 to 9 per cent, or about the current U.S. level.

With the rise in the prime lending rate to large firms, the special rate to small businesses also went up .5 per cent to 7.75 per cent. Some companies raised it to 8 per cent.

Victoria trust firms and banks were studying the rates they paid on deposits to see what rates might be increased to attract more funds.

Generally, trust companies pay 8.5 per cent for five-year term deposits, although a few pay 8.75 per cent. Bank deposit rates are generally slightly lower.

Announcements by banks so far include:

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has increased its prime rate to 8.25 per cent, effective immediately.

Identical increases take effect Wednesday for the Toronto-Dominion, Bank of Nova Scotia and Royal Bank of Canada.

Toronto-Dominion, Nova Scotia and Commerce also announced a retroactive increase to Aug. 1 in the interest paid on non-chequing savings accounts.

That rate is raised to 6.25 per cent.

The Royal Bank of Canada and the Royal Trust both announced increases in their conventional and NHA mortgage rate to 10 per cent from 9.75 per cent.

The companies are not related but each is the largest in its field. Other banks and trusts are expected to fall into line.

At 10 per cent, a person taking out a $20,000 mortgage would pay back $63,187.20 at $175.52 per month over a 30-year period.

By contrast, the same loan at 9 per cent would cost $57,934.80 at $160.93 per month.

A person holding a 7 per cent mortgage, once considered a high rate, would pay only $47,905.20 at $133.07 per month for the same $20,000 loan.

A $20,000 mortgage is the conventional level for a $30,000 house. By paying a special insurance rate, homebuyers can mortgage their houses up to 95 per cent of the appraised value, which is usually about 10 per cent below the expected selling price.

Bank of Canada governor Gerald K. Bouey, in announcing the new increases, warned the banks were still being too free with their cash and suggested a pulling back in loan activity.

He added that Canadian rates were under considerable pressure because of generally higher interest rates in other countries. European countries were charging 10 per cent or more for prime loans.

the weather

The rather broad area of high pressure still predominates over most of B.C., keeping skies generally clear in most regions. Low level moisture in the south coast will keep some low cloud and fog over much of the coast areas but daytime heating will quickly dissipate this cloud through the morning. The other area of concern is the Kootenays where daytime development will bring cloud and likely the odd shower. The elongated disturbance across the northern gulf of Alaska will gradually ease to the southeast somewhat slower than originally expected and will spread cloud into the north coast later today. Some rain will occur Tuesday night and likely Wednesday. Other regions can expect a repeat of Tuesday on the Wednesday and with the interior temperatures climbing a little higher.

Saved... By a Bottle Note

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A 57-year-old Edmonton man who drifted in a 21-foot motorboat for 11 days after he ran out of gas was rescued Sunday after an SOS note he sent in a bottle was found on shore by a nine-year-old girl.

RCMP reported today that Ray Tanner survived his ordeal in good shape.

Police said Mr. Tanner went on a fishing trip July 26 about 60 miles west of Yellowknife. He put his call for help in an empty cashew bottle and it drifted about five miles before Mary Ann Madsen of Yellowknife picked it up Sunday.

She told a bush pilot who was in the area and he flew back to this territorial capital where RCMP were called in. Officers went out in a single-engine Otter equipped with floats and brought gasoline to the stranded fisherman, who was alone on his expedition.

"He was getting tired, but he could have stayed quite a while," an RCMP spokesman said. "He was pretty happy to see us."

Mr. Tanner rigged a sail on his cruiser while he was drifting, and was 30 miles southwest of Yellowknife when he was spotted. RCMP credited Mr. Tanner's precise directions with the quick rescue.

The note read:

"Aug. 2, 4 p.m.

"Seven days tonight ended here out of gas off course. Having left Groscap six in evening and navigated too much westerly then later northerly. Going southwest of Mirage Islands into North Arm.

"Have today at noon set sail with bedsheet heading for navigation channels again with square black flag and ball. Yellowknife is our destination, and God willing, we will need help badly.

"Ever, Ray Tanner.

"Ship My Last Dollar. With love and prayers for all."

Island Study Set

Resources Minister Bob Williams announced today the start of an inter-departmental study of natural resource problems on Northern Vancouver Island.

Williams said the main purpose of the study will be "to evolve a resource allocation strategy" for the northern part of the Island, and in particular to examine timberland management within the area.

The study is to be co-ordinated by Vancouver resource consultant Howard Paish, who has conducted environmental studies for the NDP government on previous occasions.

The study group, Williams said, will consist of senior regional staff members from various government departments which are responsible for resource administration and planning on Vancouver Island.

The study will spotlight the Psitika watershed area and Scoen Lake. The government moved earlier to establish an ecological reserve in the Psitika-Schoen area, but the study to be undertaken is intended to cover a greater area.

A completion date of Feb. 1974 has been set for the study, which will begin immediately.

VOTE COSTS DETAILED

The Social Credit Party and its candidates spent $1.36 million in campaign expenses fighting the August, 1972, British Columbia election, an official report said Monday.

The New Democratic Party spent $490,768.

The report shows the NDP, which has 38 seats in the 55-seat legislature, won the election with 448,260 votes, or 39.69 per cent of the popular vote. The ousted Social Credit party picked up 352,776 votes, or 31.16 per cent of the popular vote, for 10 seats.

The Liberals spent $350,834 during the campaign, and the Progressive Conservatives $380,939.

Ferry Unions Taking Different Talks Tack

Representatives of 2,000 unlicensed personnel on B.C. Ferries met management over breakfast this morning in Vancouver to discuss the current dispute which has threatened a tie-up of ferries at the height of the tourist season.

"We have discussed the problems very thoroughly and we have made certain proposals which might be able to resolve the problems and we told him (ferries manager Monty Aldous) we are quite prepared to attempt to negotiate a solution to these problem areas," said Norman Thornber, business agent for the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union.

"I expect we will get back to the bargaining table in the next day or so."

While Thornber was meeting Aldous in Vancouver, the Victoria staff representative of the BCGEU, Peter Marshall, spokesman for the 400 licensed personnel — deck officers and engineers, said he was considering a direct appeal to the cabinet to get negotiations going again.

He said "our people are losing patience" and added that when he tried to arrange a meeting with Aldous Monday, he found out he was in Vancouver. "We find their avoiding us hard to understand," he said.

For the first time, a split between the unlicensed branch and the licensed branch of the BCGEU, evident in weekend comments by Thornber and Marshall, came into the open.

Thornber said today that when negotiations resume, they will not be on a joint basis between the two branches and ferries management.

During the weekend, Thornber warned that a strike could start soon. But Marshall said the licensed personnel were not thinking along these lines and that much more negotiating would have to take place before this point was arrived at.

Thornber, who kept his comments on the split brief, said "considering the source, the statement by Peter Marshall is not too surprising. We suspect it does not reflect the thinking of Local 2."

Both leaders, however, agreed they weren't impressed with a statement by Transport Minister Robert Strachan Monday in which he said ferries management has gone "about as far as it can go" in the current dispute.

The crews have been offered the same raise as other government workers, 10 per cent with a minimum of $7 monthly, plus several benefits aimed at meeting special requirements of ferry crews. But Strachan said granting additional benefits would be discriminatory against other civil servants.

Marshall called Strachan's statement "incredible, uninformed and provocative." The licensed branch submitted a 15-page brief on outstanding issues "so there is more than just statutory holiday pay" outstanding.

He said the issues include salaries, statutory holiday pay, job rate adjustments and a shift differential.

Marshall said the government is being inconsistent in saying it can't agree to double time and a half for statutory holiday work because it would set a precedent for other government workers when ferries management had at one point in negotiations offered "in effect, triple time."

BARRETT OFF TO CONFERENCE

Premier Barrett leaves tonight for Charlottetown and a three-day conference of Canadian premiers.

Going with the premier will be Attorney-General Alec Macdonald and two of the premier's aides.

Barrett said today the main points to be raised by the B.C. contingent will be a position paper on Canadian off-shore fisheries and a discussion of the other premiers' positions on foreign ownership of land in Canada.

The premier said B.C. is concerned that the Canadian fisheries industry has not been developed adequately and is specifically worried about the extent of Canadian control and ownership of the industry.

Students Rampage

SALISBURY (Reuter) — About 140 black students were arrested today when they went on a rampage through the grounds of the University of Rhodesia, stoning buildings and police.

Police Ram Bomb Car

BELFAST (UPI) — A police vehicle today twice rammed an auto carrying a 50-pound bomb during a high-speed chase through Belfast's city centre, knocking a gun-carrying girl from the car into the street.

The bomb exploded 20 minutes after the car crashed off Great Victoria Street near the Protestant Sandy Row area, causing extensive damage to property. There were no casualties.

Police arrested the girl and two men. The girl fell from the speeding car when it was first rammed.

"She, and a pistol, fell out into the street," a police spokesman said.

Police stopped only to haul the girl and the gun into their vehicle, continued the chase and rammed the vehicle again before it finally crashed, he said.

In South Belfast's Ormeau Road another car bomb explosion damaged property. Police again reported no casualties.

DRUG KINGPIN GUNNED DOWN

PARIS (UPI) — Police today identified a bullet-ridden body found in the Seine River as that of the long-sought chief heroin trafficker of the "Latin American connection."

The remains of Frenchman Andre Condemine, 40, were found stuffed in a metal trunk drifting by the banks of the Seine July 28 and police examiners said today they identified him from dental records. They said he had been dead at least six months.

U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs agents in Paris said they had been searching for Condemine as the chief supplier and expediter for the Latin American connection — a trail of heroin from Marseilles in Southern France to the United States via numerous points in South and Central America.

GUNMEN BUNGLED, HIT WRONG FLIGHT

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The two Arabs who attacked a line of passengers in the Athens airport terminal Sunday said they had been ordered to kill travellers en route to Israel, "but they got their flights mixed up," Greek police reported.

"Their mission was to attack Trans World Airlines passengers heading for Tel Aviv," said one investigator. Those passengers boarded their plane minutes before the two men opened up with grenades and pistols.

The gunmen attacked a line waiting to board a TWA flight to New York. They killed two Americans and an Austrian and wounded 55 persons.

The police said the two killers claimed they were members of Black September, but a Black September spokesman in Beirut said his organization had "nothing to do with the Athens operation."

The gunmen were identified as Mohammed Zemod, 21, a Palestinian refugee, and Talal Kadooral, 21, a native of Egypt.

Own Lottery for West

B.C. will participate in a Western Canada lottery scheme along with the provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

At the same time, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the three provinces will not allow a national Olympic lottery in their areas to raise funds for the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal.

The provincial secretary said the B.C. position is that only one lottery system should be operating in the province. The government, along with Manitoba and Saskatchewan, is willing, however, to set aside a fund for such projects as the Olympics, or the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The decisions came out of a meeting Hall had last week with representatives of the other three western provinces. Alberta has decided not to participate in the scheme.

The ministers directed a task force to prepare plans for introduction of the lottery. The plans are to be submitted for approval by Sept. 15.

Concerning the special fund for such projects as the Olympics, Hall said an interprovincial committee of ministers would be making grants to qualifying organizations from the fund, which would be made up of a percentage of proceeds of the western lottery scheme.

Hall's meeting with the other western ministers took place Friday in Vancouver.

Toward a Regional Program

The proposal to operate both of Victoria's acute care hospitals under one board, instead of two as at present, has been revived again. This is not the first time such a discussion has been raised, and it has had increased interest since the Sisters of St. Ann dissociated themselves from the administration of St. Joseph's Hospital, now Victoria General.

There has been sufficient co-operation between the boards of the two hospitals to create a successful division of some hospital work, so that expensive equipment and highly specialized services will not be duplicated. The question is, could this trend be better planned and administered by a single board, directing the two institutions as one?

The question becomes answered to some extent when the proposal to hand over administrative control of hospitals to the Capital Regional Board is considered. The Board is already empowered to decide on the location and financing of hospital buildings. Adding administration on a regional basis—particularly with some additional institutions about to be built into the local resources—could be a logical next step.

There is not necessarily a virtue in mere size of operation, however. The benefits of both joint and separated boards might be achieved by having functional boards to run each hospital under the general integrating action of a regional body. The current trend toward intermediate, recuperative and other hospital services, plus home-care, a co-ordinated ambulance service and other essentials, gives the idea of regional control greater validity.

Clearly, we are moving into a new phase of hospital organization, which will be governed by the growth of population, the rapid strides in special procedures, new and revolutionary equipment, and the need for highly trained staffs to back up the medical and surgical specialists of today. Facts, not theories—and certainly not politics—should provide the answers.

Too Many People on the Beach

Down at the misty low tide line the view is alarming. A long row of motorized gypsies huddle along the edge of the trees, framed in the haze of 500 camp fires. From a distance it could be an armored division's bivouac, but it's only an average summer weekend at Long Beach, now legitimized and organized, in the colorless language of Ottawa, as Pacific Rim National Park.

The rim is a little ragged these days. Campers, trailers, buses and cars filled with the flotsam of a lazy society weave their way over the mountains to the pounding surf. On arrival they go a little mad. Cars and motorcycles roar along the sand highway, oblivious of small children, despite the 20-mile per-hour speed limit. They spin and skid with reckless joy although a circular issued to every vehicle says that such activity will either crush or suffocate numerous small marine organisms living in the sand.

Others haul out their propane stoves and hibachi grills and also light a large bonfire, even though the temperature is in the mid-seventies. Small driftwood pieces are scarce so people are now chopping or chain-sawing the large logs. Will the scrub timber be next? If it succumbs to the passion for fires all that will be left is blowing tissues and toilet paper — evidence that some pampered campers can't walk a few hundred feet to the toilets provided along the beach.

Park regulations require all dogs to be kept on leash or otherwise restrained but the rule is ignored as canines prowl the campsites, sniffing the coolers and generally making a nuisance of themselves. Bits of broken glass are another hazard in the camping area.

Park wardens and the RCMP continually patrol the beach but it is a long beach and once the cruiser has disappeared down the strand the cowboys roar out again. Nor should park officials be condemned. Garbage is collected each day and one man even gathers bottlecaps and the charred remnants of beach fires.

An obvious first step to clearing up the mess is to ban all vehicular traffic from the beach. Campers and trailers could be provided with parking areas close enough to the beach to afford people a good walk. When these areas become plugged it may be necessary to reserve spaces in advance.

Now that Highway Four is completely paved, Tofino and Ucluelet are experiencing mild booms. These two communities could also expand local camping facilities. If the current situation continues for another few years Canada's 21st national park might become another Coney Island wallowing in its own refuse.

The Off-Key Sirens

Chief Simmons, a good man at his job, seems to be trying to set fires instead of extinguish them with his recurrent suggestion that a fire hall should be built in Beacon Hill Park. He takes the dogged "engineering" view: a piece of the park is in a usable location for a fire hall and it must be cheap to acquire because it's only trees and grass. Therefore it should be built on. The same reasoning is used by some road "planners" who join two points with the shortest line regardless of whether a priceless park may lie on the route.

Alderman Christie's suicidal support for the fire hall suggestion can only be explained on the supposition that he does not intend to run again for city council.

We must assume that Council will again make short work of the Chief's proposal—better still, not even give it the dignity of consideration. If all else fails, of course, the public will be protected by court decisions of the past that Beacon Hill Park may be used only for recreation and peaceful enjoyment of the open space. And in this regard, the city's constant encroachment on the parkland over the years for barns, caretaker's accommodation, high wire "concentration camp" fencing and other non-conforming lumps should be kept under tight control.

The Truth, the Whole Truth . . .

TORONTO — The congressional investigation in the United States has long been considered by many Canadians to be one of the worst features of the American system. It is part of Canadian jingoism, for example, to be fascinated by the revelations of the current Watergate hearings and repelled by their effect on personal reputations.

Undoubtedly this attitude has been a major reason why there have been, relatively speaking, few legislative investigations in Canada. The common recourse of governments and legislatures, whenever an alleged scandal arises, is to establish a public inquiry or commission, almost always headed by a judge.

Thus the Canadian conscience is soothed, and the politicians are able to avoid an awkward situation. Nobody, the theory goes, is going to be smeared in a proceeding where the rule of law applies and a judge is present to keep things in hand. The politicians are not only spared the unpleasantness of attacking citizens directly, they are free to praise or criticize the judge's report as their political partisanship requires.

Mostly Myth

On the record, of course, the theory is mostly myth. The rule of law does indeed apply to public inquiries, but it is not necessarily the same law that applies to the courts; hearsay evidence, for example, is admissible at a public inquiry and necessarily so, because nobody is on trial and the object is to root out the truth.

Often this means that individuals are smeared. It is quite common at a public inquiry for lawyers to attack a witness in a way that politicians, at a legislative investigation, would never dream of doing.

Moreover, it is a rare judge who can regard himself, in a public inquiry, as an investigator. That function is tacitly assigned to the commission counsel — in effect a government appointment whose enthusiasm for exposing government wrong-doing frequently leaves something to be desired. The result, more often than not, is a whitewash which may be very convenient for the politicians — both to attack and defend — but does little to correct what may be a very serious public problem.

There is therefore much to be said for the investigation of alleged public scandal by parliamentary committee. If, however, this instrument is to be used more frequently than it has in the past, there will have to be a clearer understanding by all concerned of the ground rules. To Canadian eyes, Watergate may repel but at least the Washington Senators have a considerable body of developed law to follow; in this country, few people know what the score is and fewer still can agree on it.

These considerations are prompted by the inordinate mess the select committee of the Ontario Legislature has got itself into in its investigation of the contract awarded by Ontario Hydro to Canada Square Corporation for the construction, on a lease-purchase basis, of Hydro's new $44.5 million head office building.

First the committee, having issued a subpoena on Gerhard Moog, president of Canada Square, for his appearance with certain documents, backed away from enforcing the subpoena when Mr. Moog (on advice of counsel) refused to produce them. As a result of the compromise which was eventually worked out, there is now no assurance that the committee is getting all the documents it should have to do a complete investigation.

Having stumbled on this hurdle, the committee then was confronted with an assertion of client-solicitor privilege, with Mr. Moog's counsel claiming Mr. Moog could not testify as to certain things because they arose out of communications with one of his several lawyers. Again the committee vacillated, with Conservative members crying that they certainly did not want to violate the client-solicitor privilege and with even so accomplished a lawyer as James Renwick (NDP — Riverdale) seriously suggesting that perhaps the issue should be referred to the courts for a decision.

GERHARD MOOG

The result was an incredible day of testimony in which the witness was J. A. Bradshaw, one of Mr. Moog's lawyers. Mr. Bradshaw could not answer a number of questions because of the solicitor-client privilege; if he did not claim it, his counsel, Claude Thomson, often did on his behalf and if both of them missed it there was always G. D. Finlayson, Mr. Moog's counsel, in the background to assert it blanket-fashion. Naturally, by the end of the day, the impression was strong that the committee was not getting all the information it needed to do its job.

Yet there is no law which says the solicitor-client privilege exists as a bar to giving testimony to a committee of the Legislature. Provided that it is operating within its constitutional jurisdiction, a parliament can do what it pleases, subject only to the limitations it imposes on itself.

The only limitations the Ontario Legislature has imposed on itself (or its committees) are contained in the Ontario Evidence Act, namely that conversations between spouses are privileged and cabinet documents cannot be subpoenaed. In recent years, the Legislature has imposed many rule-of-law limitations on administrative and quasi-judicial tribunals, but it specifically exempted itself from this legislation.

The solicitor-client privilege exists, of course, in common law and may be argued (by some) to be part of the law of the land which applies to all, legislatures included. There appears to be no Canadian jurisdiction on the point; but in Britain, for what it is worth, it was well established during the evolution of parliament practice that the control of Parliament over its proceedings is absolute and cannot be interfered with by the courts.

Accepting the Law

Knowing the law, however, is one thing and accepting it is another. Quite obviously, the members of the select committee (or most of them) do not want to accept the law on solicitor-client privilege as it relates to them. They would much rather import, at least as a guide, the law as it relates to the courts.

This sounds eminently reasonable and discreet but in fact it is fallacious analogy. Undoubtedly the solicitor-client privilege is an essential protection in the courts; without it, wrote J. C. McRuer in his monumental report on civil rights in Ontario, "the whole structure of our adversary system of administering justice would collapse." But a legislative investigation is not part of the adversary system of administering justice.

A legislative investigation is an attempt to secure all information relevant to the subject of its inquiry. Such information may well include, as in the present instance, conversations or correspondence between a businessman and his solicitor. Unless it is claimed they were related to actual or contemplated legal proceedings, the legislators and the public ought to know of them. Otherwise, the acceptance of such a loophole to full disclosure will ensure that they know nothing.

Dangerous Vacuum After Tito

It is frequently said the most heavily armed powers are paralyzed by their military strength because they cannot use it to any sensibly political purpose. It is also said the super-powers have discovered that under-developed nations are difficult to deal with, as America found in Vietnam and Russia found in the Congo, Indonesia and Egypt.

Nevertheless, none of these truisms applies to Soviet relations with Eastern Europe. In that area, contiguous to the Soviet Union and dominated by its ideological, economic and military concepts, Moscow has made it clear that it will admit limited reforms but never tolerate serious departures from the Kremlin norm.

The so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine" asserting Russia's right to intervene in affairs of other "socialist" lands was Stalin's invention, was scrupulously applied by Khrushchev, and was not formally opposed by the West at the Helsinki European Security conference.

The U.S.S.R. has managed to hang on to what it considers its proper European domain despite uprisings during the past 20 years in East Germany, Poland and Hungary and a temporary deviation in Czechoslovakia.

Blazing Opponent

The big exceptions have been Yugoslavia and, far less important, Albania. Rumania has tacked along a relatively more independent diplomatic line but remained allied to Moscow.

Marshall Tito is the blazing opponent to the rule of the Stalin-Khrushchev-Brezhnev doctrine. This is what makes Yugoslavia such a dangerous point in reckoning prospects for the next decade. Moscow has never really acknowledged Belgrade's right to practise its own version of Marxist theory or to be truly non-aligned.

Now that Tito is an octogenarian there are rumbling tensions within his multi-national republic and it is suspected that some of these are nourished by pro-Soviet agents.

Tito, a deeply independent-minded man who insisted on his own ideological interpretations, showed himself ready to fight for his country and his political ideas. He successfully faced down Stalin and ultimately retreated to neutrality. He sought to ration both Marxism and freedom and is finding that halfway measures work with difficulty.

In his struggle to keep an instinctively centrifugal country and a mixed credo firmly enough established to survive the death of their symbol, Tito is running into trouble. Croatian nationalism has revived in a ferocious form; rival Serbian nationalism reacted strongly. Liberal Communism produced personal debates between Tito and formerly close friends such as Milovan Djilas, Alexander Rankovic and Koca Popovic, once at the hierarchy's top. Djilas and Rankovic have been disgraced. Popovic seems to be on the shelf.

MARSHAL TITO

Tito is trying to steer between the super-powers. Schoolbooks are relatively anti-Soviet in orientation. Workers are allowed a de facto if not a de jure right to strike. Hundreds of thousands of Yugoslavs are permitted to work in capitalist lands. Open discussion is heard on whether Leninism is "contradictory in itself." Eighty-five per cent of all agricultural land is farmed in the "private sector." The World Bank has even offered financial help to develop this.

Nevertheless, Tito has made it clear that he believes his own form of "socialism" must be strengthened. Foreign trade with East European countries has recently mounted. And the army, told that its ultimate task is to protect Yugoslavia against invaders, has also been ordered to defend socialism within the country.

Warning Issued

Yugoslav Communists have been warned not to make the error of ever allying themselves with "non-socialist" forces in asserting their independence of Moscow; also that, while the seven republics are to be permitted autonomy, the federal state remained wholly sovereign. The thought of decentralizing the party has been discarded and the habit of consensus among the republics is once again encouraged. When Tito finally dies, a collegial succession and a rotating party secretariat are planned to succeed him.

So long as the old marshal, with his enormous reputation, is at hand to guide Yugoslavia along its fascinating tightrope the country seems certain to survive. The question now becoming imminent is, however, whether this same tortuous path can be followed once he has gone.

When that moment comes, one wonders whether Moscow and its agents will be as ready to allow the Yugoslavs that same freedom of action — even if marred by restraints against independent spirits such as Djilas. This is perhaps the most delicate question now facing Europe. And if Brezhnev should be tempted to apply his "doctrine" with any degree of subtlety, it is not probable that the rest of the world will do more than make verbal protests.

Appreciation

As two American students who spent a few days hitchhiking, camping and sight-seeing this past month on the Island, we would like to express a thank you to all who aided us in our meanderings. We were quite impressed with the interest and friendliness of the Island people, especially those at the Tourist Information Centre in Victoria and the motorists who generously stopped at our outstretched thumbs, often took us out of their way and provided interesting conversation throughout. Also, only in Canada would weary travellers be able to count on a warm stew dinner, hot shower and comfortable sleeping accommodations at minimal expense such as we found at the Kool-Aid Hostel. Thank you all very much. — Vicki Palmert, Ginny Bulger, 2925 N. 5th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Fire Cause

Of all the unmitigated drivel I'm forced to read almost daily in the local newspapers is this one about "Smokers Start Forest Fire."

The "news media" would have it that hordes of cigarette smokers idle through the woods throwing lighted cigarettes right, left and behind them.

Any mature male will realize that these forest fires are started by arsonists who maybe profit by the high wages paid fire fighters — and little fire fighting they do when employed in that capacity.—H. I. Duncan, 1249 Camrose Cr.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of August 7, 1913:

Before the eyes of thousands of people John Bryant, the plucky aviator who had been making flights here in his aeroplane, fell to his death on top of the Lee Dye building at the corner of Cormorant Street and Theatre Alley. There was a wild rush of people from all sides towards Chinatown and Cormorant and Fisguard Streets, which became almost instantaneously a solid mass of people. Detective Heather, Motor Constable Foster and Constable McLellan had started on the run from police headquarters immediately on seeing that the man was going to fall, and were at Theatre Alley before the place got choked up.

'A Shameful Record' of Religious Persecution

Canada is considered to be one of the freest lands in the world. Its civil liberties are protected by law, and its form of government is democratic.

Canada has long had such a reputation among the nations of the world. But what is not as well known is how both government officials and ordinary citizens have had to struggle at times to keep it that way.

On two occasions in the past, there were controversies raised over the issue of religious freedom. This involved the right of Jehovah's Witnesses to carry on their peaceful work as Christian ministers. The settling of this issue has resulted in some fine constitutional decisions by the Supreme Court of Canada. These have made an important contribution toward protecting the freedoms that Canadians now enjoy.

During Wartime

But who was responsible for challenging the rights that are today treasured as part of Canada's freedoms? From what source did the pressures come to try to deny these Christians their freedoms?

The two occasions were in 1918 and 1940, during times of war. But since that is past history, why does the matter arise now, in 1973? Because recently the official records of the Canadian government have been opened for public inspection at the Public Archives Library in Ottawa. Now, the real story of why religious freedom was challenged is available for the first time from the government's own files.

The summer of 1940 was a dark time for the Western nations supporting the Allied cause in the Second World War. Hitler's armies had overrun most of Europe. France fell in a matter of weeks.

The collapse of Allied power in Europe sent shock waves across Canada. Excitement, fear and suspicion gripped the people.

In this atmosphere of tension Canadian Minister of Justice Ernest Lapointe, a Roman Catholic from Quebec City, rose in the House of Commons on July 4, 1940, to announce:

"I desire to lay on the table of the House an order-in-council declaring illegal the organization known as Jehovah's Witnesses."

The ban immediately triggered a wave of persecution against these innocent Christians. The very next day the Mounted Police began raiding their private homes and halls. Jehovah's Witnesses were arrested and imprisoned for merely having in their possession Bible literature that had been part of their personal libraries for many years.

In some areas, the persecution turned into a veritable witch hunt. A meeting for celebrating the Lord's Supper (what the churches call "holy communion") was broken up in Quebec City. Children were expelled from school and taken away from their God-fearing parents. Many Witnesses were prosecuted and jailed.

But in all this persecution, these Christians were not charged with any wrongdoing. They were penalized merely for being Jehovah's Witnesses.

LAPOINTE
. . . judge and jury

John Diefenbaker, a member of Parliament from Saskatchewan, brought this to the attention of the House of Commons, saying:

"I believe there have been some five hundred prosecutions of Jehovah's Witnesses, none of which had to do with subversive activities, the entire offence being that of belonging to an organization banned under the defence of Canada regulations."

The ban aroused much bitter criticism on the part of the public. It was obvious to many Canadian citizens, including high government officials, that the vicious campaign against these humble Christians was totally unjust.

The ban had been imposed in a most arbitrary manner. The Witnesses were not given any notice, hearing or opportunity to defend themselves.

Lapointe acted as prosecutor, judge and jury. Although a committee of members of Parliament had been appointed to recommend changes in the Defence of Canada Regulations, Lapointe bypassed the committee and caused the ban to be imposed on July 4, 1940.

But in 1942 a Select Committee of the House of Commons held hearings to review what was being done under the Defence of Canada Regulations. After a fair hearing, the committee on July 23, 1942, unanimously recommended lifting the ban. Here are some comments of the committee as taken directly from the official debates of the Canadian House of Commons:

"No evidence was put before the committee by the Department of Justice which indicated that at any time Jehovah's Witnesses should have been declared an illegal organization."

"It is a disgrace to the Dominion of Canada that people should be prosecuted for their religious convictions in the way in which these poor people have been prosecuted."

The unanimous recommendation was made to the Canadian government in July, 1942. But the minister of justice ignored it.

True, the department by this time had a new minister of justice, Louis S. St. Laurent, who was also a Roman Catholic, from Quebec City. And he adamantly refused to lift the ban.

The members of the Select Committee whose recommendations were being ignored were incensed. They were loud in their protests when the subject came up again for debate in the House. The official record carries the following statment by member of Parliament Angus MacInnis:

AWAKE

(From an article in the bi-monthly publication of the Jehovah's Witnesses.)

"This fact still remains; that is, that no evidence has been placed before this committee that would justify the declaring of the Jehovah's Witnesses an illegal organization. In my opinion it is clear, pure religious prejudice that is maintaining the ban."

Victor Quelch, a member of parliament from Acadia, added his observations:

"It does make one wonder whether the action against Jehovah's Witnesses is largely on account of their attitude toward the Roman Catholics, instead of their attitude of a subversive nature . . .

"That question is being asked all over this country. I am asked it from one end of Canada to the other."

Cover-Up

These comments were getting close to the truth. And soon a ground swell of accusations formed. These accusations were to the effect that Jehovah's Witnesses were being persecuted at the demand of the Roman Catholic Church.

The mask was wearing thin. But the Church could not afford to have its political meddling come out in the open. So Minister of Justice St. Laurent felt that he had to move to cover over the matter. Thus, on October 14, 1943, at the height of World War II, the ban was lifted.

Such a reversal of position at that crucial period in history was truly astonishing. It was really an admission that there were no grounds at all for measures that had been taken against the Witnesses.

But would the lifting of the ban hide the truth of what really went on behind the scenes? No, it would not.

Now, the opening of Canada's official archives reveals what really happened. And what was the real reason for all the persecution?

The man who could really dictate policy was Roman Catholic Cardinal Rodrigue Villeneuve. When Ernest Lapointe became Canadian minister of justice, knowledgeable people recognized that he was primarily the representative of the Catholic Church.

The government archives, now made public, reveal the truth. They show that before the war even started, Lapointe was being peppered with demands from Catholic organizations to stop Jehovah's Witnesses. The war provided a convenient camouflage behind which the minister of justice hoped to conceal the intrigues of the Roman Catholic Church.

The key point was reached when the following letter, in French, was sent from the cardinal's palace to the private secretary of Lapointe. It was written on June 27, 1940, but Paul Bernier, chancellor of the archdiocese of Quebec:

"Dear Sir:

"His Eminence the Cardinal would be happy if you would draw the attention of the Right Honorable Mr. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, to the enclosed leading editorial of Quebec, concerning the publications of the Watch Tower or Jehovah's Witnesses.

"Certain books and pamphlets again recently addressed through the mail, and in particular the periodical Consolation, are all that which is the most demoralizing and most destructive of the spiritual strength of the country.

"Thanking you in advance, dear Sir, for your kind attention to this letter, I remain

Yours very truly,

Paul Bernier, Chancellor"

The "leading editorial" that the cardinal's office enclosed with their letter was from the newspaper L'Action Catholique. This paper was the official voice of the Quebec hierarchy. The editorial stated:

"A lot is being said about sabotage.

"With good reason a careful watch is kept on those who could blow up ships under construction, explosive works, etc., etc. But there are still more dangerous agents of sabotage; those are people who prepare the mind and heart for subversive activity by sowing revolutionary ideas and kindling feelings of revolt.

"Among these public enemies, there are none more hypocritical and more harmful than Jehovah's Witnesses and their agents.

"Any time of day, in one parish or another, in country

ST. LAURENT
. . . kept ban on

or in town, this dangerous sect gives out its poisonous booklets . . .

"Whatever the case, we declare with no hesitation that the authorities should be doing more to protect the public in this domain."

This editorial, and the accompanying letter sent to Lapointe's private secretary, were in reality a demand from the cardinal that Lapointe have Jehovah's Witnesses declared illegal. Lapointe knew that his power depended on the cardinal. He was therefore quick to respond.

The next item in this drama of secrecy and intrigue is the following letter sent to the cardinal's palace one week later, on July 4, 1940. It was from the private secretary of the minister of justice, Lapointe. Addressed to the chancellor, Paul Bernier, it said:

"Mr. Chancellor:

"Upon receipt of your letter of June 27, I took it upon myself to fulfill His Eminence the Cardinal's desire to direct the attention of the Minster to your representations as well as to the editorial published by L'Action Catholique with regard to the Watch Tower, Jehovah's Witnesses and Consolation.

"Mr. Lapointe gave me permission to let you know by telephone the confidential information that the said organization of Jehovah's Witnesses would be declared illegal as of today, with the request that His Eminence, the Cardinal, be informed of this.

"This letter is to confirm that which I just told you over the telephone.

"I understand that His Eminence the Cardinal will be duly informed of the departmental order regarding Jehovah's Witnesses.

"Please accept, Mr. Chancellor, my expression of thanks and my warmest regards."

The letter was signed by Lapointe's private secretary. So from the time of the cardinal's demand, it had taken just seven days to get the ban on Jehovah's Witnesses imposed.

Thus, from the government's own official records, the truth is now revealed. The ban against Jehovah's Witnesses was engineered directly from the palace of the Roman Catholic cardinal in Quebec City.

Restraint

What a shameful record the clergy built up in this matter. There were false accusations from religious enemies, secret files, hidden influence, no opportunity to reply, and arbitrary decrees designed to destroy freedom or worship to God.

These events point up the fact that it is not the function of human government to choose between religions. Faith cannot be legislated or decreed. Thus, when public officials are pressured to interfere with freedom of worship, they should exercise restraint. They should adopt the spirit of the philosophic Mr. Justice Holmes, who said, "The best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market."

ICCS: We Can't Blame Others

THE TORONTO STAR, an Editorial

Recrimination is a handy way to relieve pent-up frustrations, and Michel Gauvin indulged in it when he left Saigon last month. He criticized Canada's two Communist fellow-peacekeepers in South Vietnam, as well as the "very primitive" Viet Cong.

Canada's delegate to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) had provocation, of course. From the start, Poland and Hungary have tried to keep the commission from looking into Communist breaches of the ceasefire. And the Viet Cong earned his wrath by their 17-day detention and maltreatment of two Canadian observers.

In all, it was a bitter farewell to an unhappy six-month experience, although the disappointment was foreseeable when Canada joined the peace mission without having got the safeguards it demanded to ensure that the peace observers could do a thorough job.

Ottawa's post-mortem must go beyond blaming others if it is to offer any useful guidance for future Canadian participation in peace-keeping or peace-observing ventures.

A good starting point might be to recognize that the world

does not accept the scrupulously neutral valuation we place on ourselves when we engage in such work. Canada was a pominee of the West earlier in the United Nations Emergency Force for Palestine. And in practice, while we are not so blatantly biased as the Hungarians or the Poles, we are not strictly even-handed either. The Canadian mission in Vietnam appeared readier to seek out ceasefire violations by the Viet Cong than by Saigon.

But the main thing, if we are to avoid frustration and futility in peace-keeping, is to get the principle right and hold to it in the face of all diplomatic beseechings and blandishments.

The concept of peace-keeping was accepted by the great powers as a means of preventing dangerous confrontations between themselves on behalf of their local wards. (The Middle East was the model case, when both the Soviets and the Americans consented to a buffer between the Israelis and Egyptians.) Canada should be willing to undertake missions of this type, to help avert major wars. What we should not do is become embroiled in local or civil conflicts.

When Ottawa agreed to send observers to Vietnam, their task should have ended with the withdrawl of the U.S. troops and the release of American prisoners of war. To remain on the scene after that inevitably meant becoming immersed in a civil war. Yet, for all our experience on the old control commission in Indo-China, we still blundered in.

The peace-keeping venture in Vietnam brought no glory to Canada and no credit to our policy-makers. It made us no friends. And, indeed, Canada's withdrawl from the ICCS has further disorganized whatever pitiable peace machinery there is. Before we plunge in somewhere again, we had better make sure to learn the cautionary lessons of how we got into Vietnam in the first place.

What's Your Hurry?

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE

Whenever I hear someone say, "There aren't enough hours in the day for all the things I want to do," I feel I must belong to a different species.

What are these things that people are so determined to get done? What happens to the time they "save"? A while back in New York magazine Alana Lakein, who is something called a "professional time management consultant," listed a number of ways he makes more time for himself:

"I schedule my time months in advance . . .

"I skim books quickly, looking for ideas.

"I keep my watch three minutes fast.

"I revise my life-goals once a month. I put up signs reminding me of my goals.

"I don't own a television set.

"I keep a list of specific items to be done each day . . .

"If I seem to procrastinate, I ask myself: 'What am I avoiding?' then try to confront that thing head-on."

It makes me weary just to type out Lakein's rules. I have never had a life goal (or anything planned for tomorrow), never make lists of what to do because there's nothing I want to do. And I spend hours watching TV.

As for procrastination, I consider it the surest form of self-protection in a world where most things that are done had been better left undone. I know why I am putting things off and intend to continue putting them off forever.

The lengths people will go to to save time are astounding. In the same article, historian Arthur Schlesinger said he hoards the golden hours by reading the bulldog (first) edition of the New York Times the night before. "The most productive hours of the morning most people spend reading newspapers," Schlesinger sniffed. "Not me."

If the morning hours really are the most productive, it's the first I've heard of it. My heart doesn't expect to start turning over until at least noon and I would no more think of using the old brain before 5 p.m. than I would "skim books quickly, looking for ideas." A book is something to be savored and mooned over; I sometimes spend half an hour reading one page. Other times I doze right off.

New York Mayor John Lindsay gets through an 18-hour day by never going out to lunch, by getting an hour's exercise every other day and by carrying a special "action pad, where I make notes, and as soon as I get to a telephone I read the notes to my secretary to get action started." I would like to get that secretary's version.

What good has all this done Lindsay? His goal, before 1972, was to be president of the United States and to that end he bolted the Republicans, joined the Democrats and tried for the nomination—getting absolutely nowhere. Now, presumably, he's a man without a party. But he's still got that notebook.

The way to meet each newly-minted morning, I have learned, is to pull the window drapes and slip back to nodsville. If the dog barks, pray it's only someone turning around in your driveway, not a visitor. If there's a phone message, don't return the call.

Breathe deeply, eat and drink moderately, exercise sparingly and, above all, don't do anything. Resignation and inertia are nature's best defences, the only ones you need.

Israel's Seamen Strike

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — A seamen's strike spread today through Israel's merchant fleet of more than 100 ships.

Eleven ships were tied up in Israeli ports, and the seamen's union sent orders to union men aboard ships at sea to quit work as soon as their vessels reached port and to forbid loading or unloading.

The union is demanding a new contact that shipowners said would amount to pay raises of 86 per cent. A union spokesman said the figure is exaggerated.

Transport Minister Shimon Peres was given government authority to issue back-to-work orders but so far has taken no action.

B.C. Government Coffers Bulge From Share of Forest Wealth

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Provincial government revenue from the forest industry rose 82 per cent to $155 million in the fiscal year ended March 31 and could soar much higher in the present fiscal year, says Council of Forest Industries president Gordon Draeseke.

"At the present time, revenues are flowing into the provincial treasury from the forest industry at levels even higher (than last year)," he said.

The high total collected from the thriving forestry industry was the highlight of the provincial revenue report released on Friday by Premier Barrett.

While revenue from the woods was up 82 per cent, personal income tax collections rose 19 per cent to $316.4 million and sales tax revenue was up 13 per cent to $275 million.

If prices for lumber and timber remained at their present levels for the full fiscal year, an equally dramatic increase in revenue to the provincial government would be recorded by March 31, 1974.

However, Draeseke said present thinking is that prices — and revenue to the provincial government — will begin to taper off toward year's end.

Even if it does, revenues from the forestry industry can be expected to be up strongly from the 1972-73 level, due to high prices in April, May, June and July of this year.

Forecasts of a downturn in the industry this year could prove wrong, he noted.

"Trying to forecast lumber prices is as difficult as forecasting trends in the stock market."

Reason for the dramatic increase in tax payments to the provincial government is the profit-sharing aspect of the stumpage appraisal formula.

Although the legislation was passed by the Social Credit government, it is producing dramatic results at this time because of the current strength of the North American lumber market.

Stumpage rates are low on marginal operations but are 60 per cent off the top on the profit of highly-successful ventures. Right now that includes just about everybody.

If the current strength of the woods industry were to continue beyond year's end, forestry could become as important to British Columbia in the present fiscal year as oil is to Alberta.

Although only about four months of the 1972-73 year were involved in the upward drive of wood prices, the $155 million in revenue accounted for 11 per cent of all receipts by the government.

During the same year in Alberta, the oil and natural gas industry poured $300 million into the provincial treasury, accounting for 23 per cent of all revenue in that province.

The council is making no predictions in terms of numbers or percentages, but the present high prices and the present stumpage rates would produce revenue approaching the level of petroleum in Alberta if there is no downturn.

Total direct payments to the treasury from forestry companies and their employees (including provincial income tax payments) totalled $280 million during the fiscal year or about 20 per cent of the total income of the provincial government.

About 75 per cent of all manufacturing shipments on Vancouver Island are from forestry and on a province-wide basis the percentage is 49 per cent.

The industry in 1972 accounted for 18 per cent of the gross provincial product of $11.8 billion.

Earnings to Subside, Weldwood Chief Says

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president and chief executive officer of Weldwood of Canada Ltd. today cautioned shareholders against expecting improved earnings in the first half of 1973 to continue in the second half.

"Our improved earnings are attributable in a large measure to the high prices received for lumber and plywood during the first half of 1973," president Gorwon Bowell said in a prepared statement.

Net sales for the six months ended June 30 were $129,656,000, up 42 per cent from $91,346,000 in the same period last year, said Bowell.

He said net income reached $8,336,000, equal after preference share dividends to $1.65 a common share, compared with $3,576,000 or 67 cents a share in the first half of 1972.

"The strong demand for building materials that prevailed during the past year continued through most of the second quarter, but began to slacken in June," he said.

Second-quarter sales reached $69,959,000, compared with $50,214,000 in the same period last year, he said. Second-quarter income was $4,273,000 or 43 cents a year ago, said Bowell.

Toronto Star Net Up 67%

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Star Ltd. reports net income of $6.37 million or 87 cents a share for the nine months to June 30 compared with $3.78 million or 52 cents a share during the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year.

Beland Honderich, president and publisher, said in a statement to shareholders that higher profits were due to increases in revenue and reductions in federal income tax rates for processing and manufacturing corporations.

Nine-month revenue was $71.25 million during the current fiscal year and $58.97 million during the previous fiscal year.

The $12.28-million increase in revenue reflects "buoyant advertising demand and continued circulation growth," Mr. Honderich said. He also cited a "substantial improvement" in the results of subsidiary and other operations.

Wheat Futures Top $4

CHICAGO (UPI) — For the first time in the 150-year history of the Chicago Board of Trade, wheat futures prices soared over the $4 a bushel mark Monday. They opened at the permissible upward limit, 10 cents per bushel higher in all contracts, for the sixth straight.

The board attributed the record level, posted for the September contract, to foreign demand and a bullish report from a private source. The report indicated the spring harvest would fall short of expectations.

The all-time high for any contract was established daily last week from Monday through Friday to shatter the high of $3.50 set last month when the July contract expired. The record prior to last month was set in May, 1917, at $3.25.

New crop soybeans also advanced 40 cents Monday, and soybean oil was up 100 points, or one cent a pound. Oats closed the limit of six cents a bushel higher.

There was a drop in soybeans meal old crop options the limit of $15 a ton, but new crop meal advanced up to $10.

Newsprint Costs Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — An increase of $10 a ton in the price of newsprint effective Sept. 1 was reported Monday by MacMillan Bloedel.

The price of newsprint sold on the lower B.C. mainland will be $174 a ton and new prices for users in the United States will be $178 a ton.

In the U.S. the 1,761 daily newspapers have been under warning for some time from the American Newspaper Publisher's Association (ANPA) that demand for newsprint is catching up with supply.

Stanford Smith, president of the ANPA, estimates newsprint price will increase to between $225 to $250 a ton.

He predicted newspaper price increases and higher advertising costs in the very near future.

Policy Erodes Power

EDMONTON (CP) — Because the feed grain market now is extremely strong, the effects of the federal government's new feed grains policy will not be felt for some time, Bill Dascavich said Monday.

Dascavich, Alberta co-ordinator for the National Farmers Union, said the policy, announced Friday by Otto Lang, minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, is "cleverly" designed to erode the board's powers.

Granary 'Disappears'

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — High winds and hail caused considerable damage in the Delmas-Cutknife area west of here Sunday with almost two inches of rain falling within one hour.

One area farmer said a 2,000-bushel granary was pushed from its foundation by high winds, several others in the district toppled and "one disappeared completely."

Eugene Ritchot of St. Pierre, organizer of the event, estimated there were 700 people on hand for the finals Sunday, the highlight of a three-day agricultural fair.

Ukrainians Gather

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — Merry-making crowds swelled this community's population by as much as six times during the weekend for the 8th annual National Ukrainian Festival.

Organizers estimate as many as 50,000 persons visited Dauphin, straining the community's hotel and camping facilities to the limit. While the cultural exhibits attracted large crowds, the general flavor of the festival was centred around dancing, singing, eating and drinking.

3-Month Freeze On Conversions

A three-month moratorium on conversion of apartments to condominiums was approved by Saanich council Monday.

The move followed a special meeting of Mayor Hugh Curtis with senior administrative staff earlier Monday which considered the question in the light of the suggested change to the Strata Titles Act governing changeovers.

Three months should be sufficient to prepare municipal guidelines, Curtis' report said, calling a 12-month city of Vancouver freeze "unreasonable and unnecessary."

Council rejected a resolution from Capital Region Tenants' Association requesting a 12-month freeze and asking for a study into municipal purchase of apartments from landlords willing to "unload them for an even quicker profit."

Three applications already in the hands of the municipal clerk will be processed but new applications will be held.

In another matter involving condominiums council was asked to reduce assessments on a 31-unit townhouse project at Feltham and Shelbourne.

A petition from more than 25 tenants said the Saanich attitude was indicative of "charge what the traffic will bear," and said it was morally wrong to assess so high when an effort was being made to make housing more efficient.

Taxes on the units are nearly identical to those on far more expensive prpperties, petitioners said.

One of the owners, Cecil (Sid) Hubber, of 1705 Feltham, said occupants were protesting in the strongest possible terms because they felt the assessments were wrong.

He said according to the Saanich tax collector a typical property of $30,000 value should have tax of $637. Hubber's own unit, bought for $24,925 early in 1972 and assessed in the fall was taxed at $636.83. The real estate agent with whom Hubber dealt had estimated $420 gross taxes on the unit.

Ald. William Noel said he thought there was "some reason for complaint," but Curtis said council did not set assessments and he found it disturbing when a real estate agent begins to quote taxes.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said assessors have the obligation to assess equitably and fairly to the best of their ability and he was sure the effort compared with other situations in the community.

"Even if council felt sympathetic," Curtis asked, "what could it do?"

Contacted later, Hubber said the purpose of petitioning now was to prepare for a formal appeal next year.

Public Money For Suites Urged

Oak Bay council was asked Monday to combine with the federal and provincial governments to buy apartments slated for conversion to condominiums in order to protect tenants.

In a brief presented by the Capital Region Tenants Association, council was told:

"The three levels of government should not wait to acquire land for housing construction but immediately investigate the possibility of buying existing apartments that Victoria landlords are ready to unload for an ever quicker profit than that realized from apartment rents."

Acting mayor Ald. Douglas Watts said apartments, that may be converted, could be sold at "highly inflated values."

The CRTA's brief and the entire problem of apartment conversion will be studied by the council's lands and buildings committee.

In its presentation CRTA secretary Ann Tarasoff told of elderly tenants who suffered heart attacks after their building was converted to a condominium.

Mrs. Tarasofff said, "Elderly people hate to make a fuss, they'd rather move."

She said 27 per cent of those over 65 were in their 80s. Elderly people, she said, and young people who couldn't afford to buy homes, should be protected.

"They're becoming a separate race of gypsies," Ald. Douglas McLelland said of displaced tenants.

"They're struggling to live at prices they can afford. Your presentation points up the need for, not low-income housing, but reasonable cost housing for senior citizens. They don't want to turn into a band of gypsies."

German Bank Heist

PIGEONS BEYOND LAW?

Saanich Ald. Leslie Passmore became temporary pigeon inspector at a meeting of council Monday.

He was named to investigate and report on complaints of "semi-wild" pigeons bothering R. A. Cameron, 306 Uganda, at premises he owns at 2824 Heath.

Cameron said the birds, up to 12, interfere with repainting of the suites at that address and cause property damage, adding that Saanich bylaws seem to be powerless.

"If you think this is amusing, you haven't had much to do with pigeons," he wrote. A police report agreed that bylaws are inadequate because they relied on being able to find an owner.

Passmore suggested police were once given authority by council to shoot nuisance-causing birds, but Ald. William Noel said there is no such authority now.

Cameron said he had no complaint against police or poundmen, visits of which had not yet caused any pigeons to disappear.

Mayor Hugh Curtis wondered whether the rising price of beef would help cause their disappearance.

Demolition Permits Face Historical Check

As a means of delaying destruction of heritage buildings in Oak Bay all demolition permits will not have to come before council's lands and buildings committee.

The decision to examine all permits was made after council was told Monday that an old farmhouse on the corner of McNeill and Monterey had been torn down.

The council has also asked the Hallmark Society to make a list of any buildings in the municipality which should be considered heritage buildings.

These will be registered as heritage buildings with the provincial government.

Press Council Fear Outlined by Alderman

Fears that a community press council could become the tool of one organization that could "intimidate" the press were expressed at Oak Bay council Monday.

Larry Ryan of the Victoria Labor Council appeared before council asking support for a community press council.

Ald. John Goult asked Ryan if the council he proposed would be patterned after the British council, which he said, had a lot of power. What kind of power, Goult asked, did Ryan want for a local press council.

Observing that "we're treated fairly well" by the local press, Goult said:

"It (the press council) could become the creature of one group or one body," adding "The council could dictate and the newspapers could be intimidated."

When asked by Goult what power he envisioned the council should have, Ryan replied:

"It would be an advisory body — a review board, modelled, perhaps, on the British one." He said it would consist of the publisher, "informed people" like teachers and professors and other members of the community.

He said that in a recent editorial Stuart Underhill, publisher of the Times made it clear he saw no purpose for such a council.

"Mr. Bower (Richard Bower, editor of the Daily Colonist) was fairly open-minded and very interested in my ideas," Ryan said.

Ald. Norman Pimlott asked Ryan if he envisaged a press council for the Greater Victoria area or the Capital Regional District.

Ryan replied, the concept "could be provincial."

"We're trying to get at the weak spots in journalism today," Ryan told council.

Council decided to table any action until Ryan had produced a clearer outline of what he had in mind.

Also tabled at Monday's meeting was a letter from Saanich council, informing Oak Bay it intended to take no action on Ryan's proposal.

None-Street Has a New Name

A street that never was had its name changed Monday.

Saanich council accepted a recommendation from the planning department to alter undeveloped Waverley Road, off Interurban near the vocational school, to Walworth Road when it was found Central Saanich has a developed street called Waverley.

The new name took aldermen unawares and there was a momentary hush in the council chamber.

"Are you prepared to defend this one, Mr. Loney?" Mayor Hugh Curtis asked the planner. "Was this the name of your dog when you were a boy?"

Loney's first reply, given in the same spirit, was simply: "We could have called it Fred Place." But when the smiles subsided again he said he had no explanation; "I really don't know."

Street names and the obscure origins of many are a Curtis hobby horse. Last year the mayor wondered how there seemed to be so many Spanish names of apparently recent origin without an historical basis.

Yankee Errors Send Tigers Out in Front

By The Associated Press

After eight innings Monday night, New York Yankees looked like a first-place team.

Unfortunately, the Yankees' baseball game against Detroit Tigers lasted 10 innings—and by the time it was over, the Yankees were fourth in the wild American League East and Detroit was on top of the heap.

First Frank Howard hit a two-run pinch homer with two out in the ninth to send the game into extra innings. Then Aurelio Rodriguez scored all the way from first on a pair of Yankee errors in the 10th to give the Tigers a 5-4 win.

The Tigers moved past Baltimore Orioles into first place in the division after the Orioles dropped a 5-3 decision to Boston Red Sox.

Cleveland Indians beat Chicago White Sox 7-3 in Monday's only other American League game.

In National League action, New York Mets beat St. Louis Cardinals 10-3, Houston Astros edged Cincinnati Reds 5-4, Montreal Expos topped Chicago Cubs 7-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers defeated San Diego Padres 2-0.

Rodriguez singled off Yankee relief ace Sparky Lyle to open the 10th inning. When Ed Brinkman bunted, Lyle fielded the ball but threw wildly past first.

As Rodriguez rounded third, right-fielder Felipe Alou threw to the plate, but his throw was wild and got past catcher Thurman Munson, rolling toward third.

"I saw the ball going toward third base, and I decided to go home," said Rodriguez.

He scored when first baseman Matty Alou, covering home while Munson chased the ball, couldn't handle the throw as Rodriguez barrelled in with a head-first slide.

Carlton Fisk's two-run single capped a four-run outburst in the first inning for the Red Sox and helped unbeaten Roger Moret to his fifth victory.

Chris Chambliss' two-run double capped a five-run second-inning outburst for the Indians. Gaylord Perry, 11-15, went all the way for the victory.

Harry Parker pitched three scoreless innings of relief for the Mets and picked up the win when New York scored three runs in the seventh and five in the eighth.

Jimmy Wynn rapped out two singles, scored three runs, stole two bases and drove home the tie-breaking run for the Astros.

Balor Moore pitched six no-hit innings for the Expos, but needed relief help from Mike Marshall and homers by Ken Singleton, Bob Bailey and Jim Lyttle to win.

Al Downing scattered five hits as the Dodgers raised their lead over second-place Cincinnati to four games.

Redmund Pushes Pak to Triumph

SEATTLE (AP) — Mickey Remund, using a propeller borrowed from a boat that has never been raced, pushed the Pay 'N Pak to victory Sunday in what is being called the most exciting day of unlimited hydroplane racing in years.

Remund in the Pak and Dean Chenoweth in the Miss Budweiser, who have been fighting it out for top place in the national point standings all year, staged a classic duel on the foggy, rainy Lake Washington course.

When it was over, Pay 'N Pak had won the race and regained the national lead with 7,438 points. Budweiser was second with 7,088 points for the season.

Bill Muncey finished third, but his Atlas Van Lines — hottest boat on the circuit last year — was never in serious contention. Pizza Pete was fourth, Ms. Greenfield Galleries fifth and Red Man I was sixth.

It was a bow-to-bow duel in the first Bud-Pak matchup. The lead changed hands several times as the 2½-ton boats screamed around the course. Chenoweth's 122.504 miles-per-hour average in the Bud beat the old heat mark of 116.079 on a three-mile course.

But Remund in the Pay 'N Pak set a single-lap record in the same heat when he circled the course once at a 124.424 m.p.h. average. The old mark was 117.137.

Remund also set an over-all race record for 45 miles in a single regatta by averaging over 117 m.p.h. for the day. The two leaders were paired again in a second preliminary heat but the Budweiser lost a comfortable nine-second lead over the Pak when an engine blew in the third lap and Remund coasted to victory.

Swimmers Continue Records Assault

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia's dominance in aquatic events pushed the host province into the lead in gold medals at the Canada Summer Games Monday.

In the fourth day of competition, B.C. picked up eight golds and six silvers in diving, swimming, water skiing and lawn bowling.

Ontario holds the over-all medal lead with 14 golds, 14 silver and 14 bronze. B.C. is second with 18 gold, 12 silver and nine bronze, and Quebec is third with 11 gold, 12 silver and 12 bronze.

Ontario won only two gold medals Monday, but added three silver and six bronze to remain ahead in the medal race. Quebec gained three gold, a silver and three bronze.

Rick Friesen and Teri York, Vancouver-area divers, capped B.C.'s day with victories in the final two diving events.

Miss York, 17, won the women's one-metre springboard with an impressive 399.48 total, well ahead of second-place Cindy Shatto of Toronto, who finished with 351.33. Janet Nutter of Manitoba was third.

Friesen's win in the men's three-metre springboard gave him two gold medals in diving. He earlier won the one-metre springboard. Glen Grout of West Vancouver gave B.C. the silver medal, with Skip Phoenix of Toronto getting the bronze.

"I was really pleased with the way things went tonight," Miss York said following her performance. "I injured my shoulder while in California a month ago and I really haven't had much chance to practise. I was worried all through the competition about how my dives would go."

Friesen, a 20-year-old Simon Fraser University student, said he was "really happy with my consistency."

B.C. won all three men's events in diving and took a total of six medals over-all, with Ron Carrington of North Vancouver adding the gold in the men's 10-metre tower.

B.C. won seven swimming medals Monday, but that performance was overshadowed by the performance of Becky Smith of Alberta, who added her third and fourth swimming golds.

Becky won the 200-metre individual medley, then outswam Gail Amundrud of Ottawa, the Games' only other four gold-medal winner, to lead Alberta's relay team to victory in the 400-metre freestyle relay.

Amundrud, 16, was the big gun for the Ontario swimmers, winning two medals on both Saturday and Sunday.

Smith, only 14, earlier won the 100-metre backstroke and the 400-metre individual medley.

The assault on the Games' record book continued at the pool Monday, with swimmers lowering marks in six of the eight events.

Wendy Quirch of Point Claire, Que., set a record in winning the 400-metre freestyle in 4:39.51 and Michael Ker of Vancouver won the men's 400-metre freestyle in a record 4:17.01.

Marlene Hartnell and Stephen Pickell, both of Vancouver, won the women's and men's 200-metre backstrokes, Brad Shirley of Vancouver won the 200-metre individual medley and the B.C. men's team captured the 400-metre freestyle relay.

B.C.'s other gold medal Monday came in water skiing, with Gregg Athans of Kelowna winning the men's tricks event.

In lawn bowling, Ontario added two gold medals, with Don Carphin and Don Twinning of Port Credit winning the pairs and the fours team of Bob Guppy, Peterborough, Ray Kempster, Ottawa, Don Stephen, Burlington and skip John Pidduck of Thamesford taking that event.

Puzzle of Car Racing: How to Define Courage

To many, automobile racing in any form is sheer madness — a genuflection to the great American God of speed, and more speed. To others, it is the mark of a man's courage, a majestic sport that is high in its demands of stamina and skill.

To Merle Bettenhausen it is a way of life — almost the only life he has ever known.

Merle Bettenhausen is one of the many drivers who competed at Western Speedway last week in the United States Auto Club midget races, and the story isn't that he lost, finished seventh, but that he did it with only one arm.

Merle is the son of a famous racing father, Tony Bentenhausen, noted for his driving skill, but probably remembered best because he was killed at Indianapolis. It is unfortunate, but true, but most tales of car violence centre on, and emanate from "Indy." This is the extension of all car mania. This is where the quick drama of auto racing reaches its peak. And when death occurs, the crescendo grows — stop it!

What About the 55,000?

It is unfortunate too that two deaths in one race this year at Indy will remembered long after the 55,000 who were killed on U.S. highways last year. And if they are going to control Indy — they will likely slow the cars down — they won't stop it. Just as people in power haven't made the wearing of seat belts mandatory in cars, have they, when it has been proved that thousands of lives have been saved in Australia by their mandatory law.

Then there's the argument that if reaching borders on the fringe of lunacy with death lurking on every bend, but what about football? The national commission on product safety in the U.S. recently disclosed that football players annually suffer 250,000 to 500,000 brain concussions during play and of these 5,000 to 10,000 have serious effects at once.

If there's a difference, it's in personal choice, enjoying the thrills at Western, or at Empire Stadium.

It was just over a year ago at the International Speedway in Michigan that Merle lost his right arm in a crash, and it didn't seem likely that he would race again. Not so, however. When recovering, he immediately made plans for a comeback, and for what could be done about that arm that was no longer there.

A Socket on the Wheel

Friday at Western he showed what a one-armed driver could do. When he got into his midget, his "new arm" was set in a socket-type arrangement on the wheel. In that way the wheel could be steadied; his left arm would do the rest of the work, the actual driving. Besides, he has had his car fitted with a form of power steering to ease the pressure and strain and just sitting there and watching him drive must have had an effect on a number of patrons.

For here was a handicapped person doing what shouldn't come that naturally, driving a race car against professionals and as a professional, asking no favors and getting none. Merle had to pass a driver's test at Indianapolis before he was allowed to compete on the USAC circuit. That made him equal with the others.

Sure, race drivers are egotists. They have to be to prove they are better than the other driver; and they know too that their sport is the most popular of all. Harper's magazine reported this year that more people would attend car racing than pro basketball, or baseball, or football. If it is what the fan wants, it is because the average driver can identify with the Jackie Stewarts and the Mario Andrettis.

The fans also learn respect for their heroes in a sport in which injury is calmly expected. In Merle Bettenhausen's case, even overcome.

Is all this madness . . . or courage . . . or some of both in varying amounts depending on the individual? Or is this, above all, the mark of a true professional, eager and willing to boost the proud-of-it status that most racing drivers have?

Who can be certain?

RAISING ARMS in jubilation at winning juvenile boys' cross-country event Monday at B.C. All-Native Olympiad track and field meet in Centennial Stadium is Francis Horne of Cowichan. Over 250 athletes competed in approximately 40 events during meet. Olympiad competition continues today through Sunday with various softball tournaments at Topaz Park. In addition, lacrosse competition will be held Saturday beginning at 2 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Gamble Fails, Bombers Sag Against Esks

EDMONTON (CP) — A sputtering Winnipeg Blue Bomber offence broke down completely after a first-half touchdown gamble failed Monday night and Edmonton Eskimos slogged their way to a 10-3 Western Football Conference victory.

The win, before 19,801 rain-drenched spectators, was the second in as many games for the Eskimos over the Bombers in the young WFC season.

After successfully converting four third-down gambles in the first half against the Eskimos, the Bombers went for a touchdown on third down from inside the Edmonton three but were stopped short of the goal.

Cornerback Ceasar Belser credited veteran defensive end Ron Forwick and rookie linebacker Sam Britts with making the key tackles on Winnipeg's unsuccessful gamble. "Any time you stop them down there, you've really got something going," said Belser.

With neither team able to sustain momentum because of a steady downpour and sloppy field, the Esks were clinging to a 3-1 lead late in the first half. Edmonton's Bob McGregor fumbled a punt by Walt McKee at the Edmonton 43 and after Gene Lakusiak recovered for the Bombers, quarterback Don Jonas marched them toward the Edmonton goal.

On third-and-one from the six, halfback Stan Brown ran two yards for the first down. Jonas lost one yard when he dropped the centre snap and Broan ran for a couple on second down before he was stopped on his third-down attempt.

The Bombers, who were in field-goal range, never recovered and failed to test the Edmonton defence in the second half. Edmonton increased its edge to 7-3 after three quarters and added three more points in the final 15 dropped balls.

Dave Cutler booted a 12-yard field goal for the winners and added singles from the 34 and 38 on wide field-goal attempts. Punter Garry Lefebvre boomed a 49-yard single and the Esks picked up four points when McKee conceded two safeties instead of attempting to punt from his end zone into a 40-mile-an-hour wind.

Jonas had a 37-yard single on a wide field-goal try and Lefebvre conceded two points so he would not have to punt deep in Edmonton territory.

The Bombers, who were plagued by fumbles and interceptions in last week's loss to Edmonton, again found their miscues costly. One of the fumbles led to an Edmonton single and Jonas' only intecepted pass, picked off by Larry Highbaugh, preceded Cutler's field goal.

Jonas only completed seven of 21 attempts for 72 yards.

BOXERS BOOST LEAD IN ISLAND PLAYOFF

Victoria London Boxing Club hammered Nanaimo City 16-5 Monday at Memorial Arena to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five Vancouver Island Senior "C" Lacrosse League semi-final playoffs.

Third game of the series is scheduled for Saturday in Nanaimo.

Dennis Bagley led Victoria scoring with five goals, one more than the total contributed by clubmate Jim Walshaw. Duff McCaghey (2), Ken Sainsbury (2), Brian Spaven and Murray Muralt completed scoring for Boxers.

Bill Good, Bill Kilby, Brian Buylan, Randy Noble and Ken Blusutig replied for Nanaimo.

Two Islanders Post Victories

Only two of nine Vancouver Island players survived when play in the men's and women's singles began Monday in the B.C. Open tennis tournament at the Victoria Racquet Club.

Marty Taylor of the Oak Bay Tennis Club dropped the first set but then settled down to play some fine tennis and beat Winston Duggan of San Jose, California, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Taylor's clubmate Tony Simnett recovered from 4-1 down in the first set, survived two set points and went on to defeat Jack Radford of Halifax 7-5, 6-3.

The oher Island players found the competition, featuring many circuit players from Australia, the United States, Spain and Brazil, just too tough.

Bob Hutton of Oak Bay served well but couldn't handle second-seeded Dave Bryant of Amarillo, Texas, and went down 6-2, 6-0.

The two youngest players in the tourney — 16-year-old Graeme Cunningham and 15-year-old Brenda Cameron of the Racquet Club — were both eliminated. George Lea of West Vancouver beat Cunningham 6-3, 6-0 and Miss Cameron bowed to Donna Judd of Yorba Linda, California, 6-2, 6-0.

Walther Plans Return to Racing

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Indianapolis race car driver David 'Salt' Walther took his first steps after more than two months Monday and said he is looking forward to racing again within a year.

"I feel pretty good but I'm still a little sore," said the 26-year-old auto and hydroplane racer who suffered burns over most of his body in a crackup during an abortive start of the Indianapolis 500 race May 28.

John's Win Ringed With 'Perfect Fit'

FREDERICTON (CP) — Like a child with a new toy, 25-year-old John Morgan looked at the shiny diamond ring on his little finger, part of the reward for winning the $10,000 Atlantic Open golf tournament Monday.

The extremely nervous Victoria professional had just defeated Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff for $1,900 first-prize money, the Peter Jackson Trophy, the shiny diamond ring and an exemption into next year's Canadian Open.

Still staring at the ring, he said: "I'm excited, I've never been this excited before.

"I've waited three years for one of these . . . it's a perfect fit."

Just 40 minutes earlier, Panasiuk and Morgan were on the tee for the sidden-death hole.

Both had good tee shots. But it was the approach shot to the green that made the difference.

Morgan fired a six-iron shot on to the green about 20 feet from the pin.

"That was a beauty. I just stroked that right down the middle. That's the best swing I've put on it for a long time."

BOB PANASIUK
. . . playoff loser

But Panasiuk, the second-round leader, was not quite as fortunate.

His iron shot fell about 60 feet short of the pin and he could not pick up the par with his first two putts.

Morgan two-putted for a par and the win.

"The moment Pannie hit his shot I knew it was short. He must have misclubbed or something," Morgan said.

Panasiuk picked up $1,425 for second place.

They finished the 54-hole event over Macqaquac provincial park golf course with two-over-par 218s, one stroke better than Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg.

Morgan put together rounds of 71-74-73 over the par-72 layout. Panasiuk had 72-71-75. The golfers had to play 36 holes Monday to complete the tournament, the result of two straight postponements because of rain.

Homenuik, who collected $950 for his three rounds of 73, lost the first-place prizes as a result of a two-stroke penalty assessed by tournament officials during the opening round Sunday for illegally fixing spike marks on a green.

Morgan, playing in a foursome with Homenuik, John Elliott of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Kelly Burnett of Halifax, pointed out Homenuik's infraction to officials and initiated a heated dispute.

Homenuik, upset by the ruling, said it was the first infraction called against him during his 17 years as a professional.

"I hit everything quite well . . . kept the ball on the short grass all day. Most of my iron shots were on the grass; I had a number of good birdie chances and I putted steadily but not spectacularly."

The 43-year-old Alexander, who won the Canadian Amateur in 1960, had five birdies, including three on the par-37 front nine.

Russell, 40, who has been a member of the Willingdon Cup team "more than five times" was one stroke behind Alexander in the individual race with a 70.

His score, which included an eagle on the par five 517-yard 14th hole, helped give British Columbia a three-game total of 217 and a two-stroke lead over Ontario in the Willingdon Cup battle.

Weslock, 55, competing in his 23rd Willingdon Cup championship, led Ontario with a 71.

Alberta is third with a 221 total, followed by Saskatchewan at 224, Quebec 225, Nova Scotia 228, Manitoba 230, Prince Edward Island 231, New Brunswick 235 and Newfoundland 251.

Russell, winner of the B.C. Amateur in 1967 and third this year, was two over par 39 on the front nine, but came in with a sizzling three-under par 31.

"It's a funny thing, this game," he said. "The longer I play it the more I realize how little I know about it.

"Just all of a sudden I made a conscious effort to slow things down a little on the back nine . . . the pieces started to fall into place.

"I was hitting the ball so-so on the front nine; two holes I played badly, but made good recovery shots to save my par. On the eighth, I hit my best drive of the day, but hit an nine-iron into the trap . . . on the ninth, I three-putted for a bogey."

"I guess the part that held it all together was my putting," he said. "Some positions I was in were the worst . . . a long way from the hole, above it and off to the side, but I was continually putting the ball a couple of feet from the hole . . . around these greens it's a job."

Russell's score combined with a 72 by Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver and a 75 by Dave Mick of Victoria, gave B.C. its leading total.

The B.C. squad, taking advantage of a new ruling this year which allows only the best three scores, didn't count a seven-over-par 78 by Ken Floyd of Victoria.

Ontario's total came from Weslock, Don White of London, 74, and Sandy Billyard of Fonthill, 74. Not counted was a disastrous 83 by Kelly Roberts of London.

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP) — Maj. G. P. Quellette of Windsor got a perfect score in the MacDougall Challenge Cup Monday at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association annual meet at Connaught Ranges near Ottawa. His score was 150 points and 24 V-bulls.

Cubans Topple Canucks in Final

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Cuba had little difficulty beating Canada in straight sets Monday night in the women's finals of the third North, Central American and Caribbean volleyball championship.

Cuba beat Canada 3-0 with sets of 15-11, 15-6 and 15-12 in a match that lasted an hour and 10 minutes to win a berth in the world tournament to be played in several Mexican cities next year.

It was the first time Cuba won the women's title, held by Mexico in the last two championships, and the first time Canada has finished as high as second place.

Canada won third place in the men's section earlier in the day, defeating Puerto Rico 15-8, 15-10, 15-17 and 15-8.

The United States captured the men's title with a 15-12, 15-11 and 15-10 victory over Cuba. It was the first time the U.S. won the title.

Canada had eliminated the United States and Cuba ousted Mexico in the women's semi-finals Sunday night. Cuba sidelined Canada and the U.S. knocked out Puerto Rico in the men's semi-finals.

The U.S. captured third place in the women's section by downing Mexico 15-10, 3-15, 2-15, 16-14 and 15-11.

PRAGUE (AP) — The U.S. students basketball team Monday beat Canada's Olympic hopefuls in a game of the Letna Cup International basketball tournament here 103-78 to hand the Canadians their first loss in four games.

Other teams competing in the tournament which ends today are a Moscow selection, the Czechoslovak national team and two other Czech teams.

Monday's game was described by the news agency C.T.K. as the best of the tournament so far. The Canadians, able to hold their own in the first half, gave the U.S. side a hard time when Phil Tollestrop of Raymond, Alta., and George Rautins of Toronto harrassed their defence with perfect long-distance throws.

Tollestop again led the Canadian team with 24 points.

Surgery Slated

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran pitcher Bob Gibson will undergo surgery this week for a leg injury suffered Saturday in New York and will be lost to the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League for four to six weeks, the team announced Monday.

Gibson, 37, suffered torn cartilage on the outside of his right knee but there was no ligament damage, Dr. Stan London, the team physician, reported after a series of tests at Jewish Hospital Monday. He said the surgery would be performed in St. Louis in the next few days.

Land Alive!

Dandelions Are Dandy, So's a Slug of Slugs

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Dandelion leaves are dandy when you're on the road.

The humble little weed that gets clobbered by ardent gardeners could be one of the best friends travelling youth can have as they take to the highways this summer.

When stomachs grumble and the budget's bent out of existence dandelion leaves combined with other natural foods could border on nectar.

The virtue of the dandelion is extolled in a voluminous tome which has taken local physician Dr. Joseph Haegert two years to complete.

Designed to help those who drop in at Cool Aid's free medical clinic, the book spells out how kids can remain hale and hearty even when there's no hamburger stand for miles.

Along with dandelion greens, Haegert suggests that stinging nettle tops, pigweed and strawberry leaves are rich with vitamin C. Rosehips, he says, are "extremely good".

Running out of tea is no problem, according to Haegert's manual. Make your own with some pine, black spruce or hemlock needles. Haegert also advocates the use of the pine's inner bark because it also contains sugar and starch.

Providing you're not too concerned about the esthetics or eye appeal even the lowliest creatures near the roadside can provide a main course.

A batch of beetles or slug of slugs or even grubs found in logs can provide that much-needed protein even if they don't exactly measure up to tenderloin as a tastebud tantalizer!

A Cool Aid worker, employed by the provincial parks department last summer, confirms that the doctor is right.

"The men I worked with told me that any insect is delicious when it's fried."

And, for a piece-de-resistance and less hunting time, try a palatable portion of garter snake.

Living off the land, though, presents its own particular brand of hazard in this technological age.

"Please be wary of roadside and B.C. Hydro right-of-ways," Haegert warns, "as well as railroads. They may well have been sprayed with herbicides that will fatally alter your digestive processes!"

For those whose stomachs become queasy at the thought of downing insects and other offerings as a regular diet, the doctor says powdered skim milk is the best source of dairy protein. Mixed with water several times a day, it will keep you going when you're too tired to cook or without means to make a fire.

Wheat germ is a great nutritional additive, says Haegert, as well as Brewer's yeast. Brewer's yeast becomes tasteless when mixed with other foods.

"But if you eat two and two-thirds of a cup of Brewer's yeast a day," says Haegert, "maybe you will get stopped for a breathalyzer test just walking down the street!"

Peanut butter, long the standby for mothers with small children, is recommended as a good source of protein and calories.

Haegert says sesame seeds are almost as good a buy.

"But at three-plus cups per day for a 154-pound man or woman," he observes, "you would probably end up tweeting like a bird."

For those who wander free as a bird and want to be sure they get sufficient vitamin D in their system the doctor has a final word of advice.

Go bare-back.

"The highest area of vitamin D production," he says, "in the body is the skin of the back. Let the sun shine in."

ON THE ROAD twosome may be miles from a hamburger stand but never far from edible greens augmented by backpack supplies of milk powder and sesame seeds. Hikers should beware of growth bordering hydro, rail and motor vehicle arteries—where toxic sprays and herbicides are often used. (Photo by Bill Halkett).

TWO YEARS of study by Dr. Joseph Haegert of Cool Aid's free medical clinic has produced a voluminous report stating that a skinny budget doesn't have to mean poor nutrition for youth on the move. Much nutrition — from spruce tea to grubs — is free for the taking, he says.

Curbs May Be Eased On 300-Acre Area

Consideration will be given to withdrawing special status from about 300 acres of Saanich just north of the university campus to permit new housing.

The land lying within the sewer enterprise, and now freed from the provincial freeze on potentially arable acreage, is bounded roughly by McKenzie, Arbutus, Finnerty and Gordon Head roads and was made a development area to protect it from multiple housing.

It is a mixture of lots and unsubdivided land restricted to half-acre minimum size. Planners will come up with a recommendation governing the type of subdivision most suitable.

W. J. Hess, of Delta, president of Cameo Development Ltd., seeks permission to proceed with subdivision of 14 acres with the area on Edgelow.

He said he had been led to believe six months ago by the municipality that a zoning amendment was being prepared to reduce minimum area requirements to 8,400 square feet.

Hess said he was aware of the special status but not that approval of his subdivision depended upon outcome of a meeting of the municipal planning committee and Saanich Advisory Planning Commission.

This meeting had not been held because of a lack of detailed information, explained committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring. He said it would be held soon.

He also said there had been considerable work load on the planning staff since Hess made his application, and the provincial land freeze had been in effect.

Council tabled Hess' letter at Monday's meeting.

When he was asked to speak, Hess told aldermen he had expected to build about four houses per acre as early as March and he had been "led on" since then. He could not wait much longer, he said.

Mayor Hugh Curtis expressed concern a developer had been "led on" in the belief that council was about to reduce zoning requirements.

Waring said the development area was declared in the "hysteria of townhouse development" on Grodon Head Road, thereby preventing further commercial and multiple density dwellings.

Hospital Merger 'Excellent Idea'

The chairman of the capital regional hospital board said today he favors asking directors at Victoria's two general hospitals and doctors how they feel about centralizing their hospital organizations.

Art Young was commenting on views expressed by John Forrester, the region's new director of hospital planning, in a Times story Monday.

Forrester suggested that a single board of directors for both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals and a single medical staff would make it easier to develop complementary roles for the two hospitals.

Each has its own board and active medical staff now although most doctors on the active staff at one hospital have admitting privileges at the other as well.

Young said he personally thought the single board and medical staff concept is "an excellent idea" and he would like to see the matter pursued.

He is in favor of asking the board of directors at each hospital and the Victoria Medical Society, which represents the doctors, for their reaction to the idea.

If a single board did come about, it would be important it was not so large as to prove cumbersome, he added.

Breakthrough Likely In Stadium Financing

Esquimalt is prepared for the first time to accept its share of financing operating costs at Centennial Stadium at the University of Victoria, Mayor Art Young said today.

"I will be recommending that Esquimalt accept its share, and I think it will" said Young, commenting on a decision by Oak Bay council to approve a financing proposal by the university stadium committee.

Combined municipal share of 1973-74 operating costs will be $17,428, of which Esquimalt will be expected to contribute about $1,600.

Oak Bay will pay $2,169.79.

Victoria is studying rejection of cost sharing and urges a "more appropriate instrument for cost-sharing" in the Capital Regional District, said Mayor Peter Pollen.

Although Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt were all partners in construction of the stadium in 1967, Esquimalt never shared in the operating costs administered by the joint university - municipal commmittee.

Victoria has been reluctant, Pollen said, because the city pays more than any other municipality for parks and recreation facilities enjoyed by the whole community.

"But even then we're saying we should contribute," Pollen said.

Saanich has not dealt with the proposal yet.

The proposal recommends:

—Payment to be made by users in ratio to the amount of use, based on a unity value of $26 per unit for 1973-1974.

—City and municipal grants to subsidize public use and a portion of organized sport use not covered by increased rental charges.

—The University of Victoria to relinquish its right to receive rental income from stadium rentals.

—The university to pay all of the "fixed costs", estimated to be $9,687 for the year 1973-1974.

—In addition, the university to pay unit rental costs of $26 per unit for its use of the stadium.

—The school districts to be requested to make annual operating grants compensating for use by respective district.

—First-time provision to be made for a fund to finance future major repairs and replacements.

INTERIM TOURIST BUREAU PROPOSED

Establishment of an interim tourist bureau for Victoria is recommended in a report to be sent to city council this week.

Ald. Bill Tindall, who prepared the report, said today the interim bureau should take over when the present Greater Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau closes at the end of September.

The interim bureau should operate until the beginning of 1974, he said, while a steering committee works out plans for a new permanent tourist bureau.

"It certainly will not be on the same scale that the bureau operated on in the past," he said of the new bureau.

He has recommended that the new bureau confine its activities to providing information for tourists once they are here, not with advertising or attracting tourists to Victoria.

FRAMPTON

Frampton Mad; Won't Run Again

Miffed by the fact his "abilities are not being utilized" veteran alderman Percy Frampton said today he is quitting politics at the end of his current term.

Frampton said he is "damned sure" Mayor Peter Pollen will be glad to hear he's not running again.

He's been an alderman for the past eight years.

"I've done everything the mayor has asked me to do without exception," he said.

He is at present chairman of the fire prevention, health and welfare committee.

Frampton said his training as an accountant and his experience in the field of recreation are not being used by council.

KILLER WHALES IN PEDDER PEN

Two killer whales, captured by a Sealand crew at dusk Monday, appear to be in good shape at Pedder Bay today.

One is thought to be a bull about 8,000-10,000 pounds and approximately 22 feet long. It is unconfirmed, but the other whale is thought to be a cow and is smaller.

Sealand president Bob Wright said it is almost certain the bull will be released later in order that whale census officials may continue monitoring the bull in its natural habitat.

Fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill, was on hand today to check on the whales.

Wright has a special permit from the fisheries department allowing him to catch up to six whales.

Permits are issued only to those wanting whales for scientific purposes or display in marinas.

COWICHAN CURBS FACING ANGLERS

Sports fishermen will be restricted in their angling activities at Cowichan Bay this weekend.

Due to a heavy concentration of young chinook salmon at the mouth of the Cowichan River and an anticipated heavy influx of fishermen competing in the $25,000 B.C. Salmon Derby on Saturday and Sunday, federal fisheries officials announced today the western derby boundary would apply to all fishermen.

This boundary runs from southern tip of Genoa Bay to the Wilcuma Lodge wharf and eliminates angling in a large part of the bay.

WEAR AND TEAR of rising traffic loads including more trucks has taken toll of Boleskine Road railway overpass where Saanich works department is replacing deck. Constant flexing of wooden structure has left shattered planks and sleepers and there are "problems with underpinnings" a spokesman said. CN Railway owns the bridge and Saanich maintains the road surface, which will be paved when new planks are laid. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Money Still Seen Prime Motivator

Management should beware of psychologists who claim money is not a prime motivator, a leading management consultant told delegates to the Western Pension Conference which opened Monday at the Empress.

Richard A. Stull, vice-president of an international management consultants firm and lecturer on management at the University of California, said personnel managers who claim money ranks low on workers' priority lists are "a pimple on the behind of progress."

Money may not matter if you have a rich wife but for the average worker with a young family to educate money is still one of the prime motivators, Stull said.

"Money makes everything grow," he said. "and the same psychologists who specialize in downgrading money as a motivator are charging more every day for their lectures."

The conference is for directors of pension plans, insurance company officials, bankers, attorneys and actuaries working with pension programs. It continues today and Wednesday.

Stull said there is an urgent need for companies to explain benefits to their employees. "The insurance companies understand the benefits in pension plans but the workers don't."

He said pension programs could not fulfill the function of motivating workers unless the employees understood the benefits.

Stull said a recent U.S. study showed 85 per cent of employees surveyed felt they needed more information about their benefits under the company program.

He defined motivation as "a means of getting someone to do something you want him to do because he wants to do it."

"You can't control things without controlling people." However, management is hampered by the fact that motivation differs for each individual employee.

All behavior is instigated by needs and directed towards objectives, Stull said, but there is no way of knowing what a person will do.

"There is no way of measuring motivation. Management can only observe what employees do and try to figure out their motivation on that basis," he added.

Inquiry Set In Death Of Tot

Victoria coroner Edmond St. Jorre will conduct an inquiry into the death of a 16-month-old Saanich boy killed outside his home Sunday, a Saanich police spokesman said today.

Police believe Nathan Richard Thyne, of 90 Sims, was struck by a car or a truck at 6 p.m., but can't establish what vehicle hit him. There were several in the area at the time, police said.

The boy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital by his father, William Thyne, 25, and was pronounced dead at 8:40 p.m.

Police said no charges are pending in the incident.

SUBSTITUTE HOST Elizabeth Gray, mother of three children, took over CBC's national morning program for month of July while Peter Gzowski was on vacation.

Mornings Tough on Hostess

TORONTO (CP) — The only trouble with CBC's nationally broadcast radio show, This Country in the Morning, is that it goes on the air in the morning, says host Elizabeth Gray who substituted in July for regular Peter Gzowski.

"All of a sudden, there I was greeting the country at a time when I'm usually grumbling at my kids," she said in an interview.

"I pretended there was one special person out there listening and I said good morning to him."

She said she also had to fight hoarseness at nine in the morning but, at the suggestion that her greeting be taped, she exclaimed:

"Oh no. It's got to be real. I just work hard to make it sound cheerful."

Mrs. Gray was already familiar to listeners of the daily show through a number of interviews she aired for the program during the last year.

"When the CBC approached me to host the show, I saw it as a super-challenge," said Mrs. Gray who has conducted her own interview show in Ottawa called Now Just Listen.

Mrs. Gray, who calls herself a "lucky freelancer," said she was also lucky when she worked with Gzowski when he was editor of The Varsity, the student newspaper at the University of Toronto.

"I was doing honors English — made a bad degree — but I was working like crazy with Peter on The Varsity. I learned a lot from him then and later when I worked for him at the Star Weekly."

Mrs. Gray, who fitted in with the blue-jeaned young men and women in the office and blended with the overused furniture in her peasant skirt, shrug shirt and bare feet, says the day for the show's staff of 15 starts at 6 a.m.

It began with the show. This means she went on to meetings and planning the next day's show instead of working everything forward and closing with a show.

"There doesn't seem to be any place planned when one can eat," she said. "I put in a 10-hour day."

"I was afraid to accept invitations for an evening out because I had to get to bed by 10. I was lucky though — my parents and in-laws are here and they provided me with sympathetic, early, quick dinners."

Mrs. Gray said her husband John, a freelance journalist, does his share as the family partner and there is a baby-sitter for her three children.

"Sometimes I try to reverse the male-female roles but it breaks down to sharing the homekeeping. I really don't want to repair the car."

SONG-WRITING DENTIST, Bob Ruzicka, a specialist in children's dentistry, has written music for 100 radio and television shows, appeared on Ian Tyson and Tommy Hunter television shows, and written 150 tunes — 30 of which have been recorded. The 29-year-old who considers himself primarily a songwriter, worked as a dentist in Inuvik, N.W.T. for a year.

Lunching Goes English

By MARY MOORE

Here is a savory luncheon dish English style — French Onion Pie.

I was visiting Gwyn Solomon for the weekend and she made this for Saturday noon lunch. Served with a salad it was hot and delicious.

GWYN'S FRENCH ONION PIE

One 9-inch unbaked pie shell
½ to ¾ lb. bacon
5 thinly sliced medium onions
1 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. pepper
4 slightly beaten eggs
1 cup evaporated milk or light cream
¼ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. salt

Saute bacon until crisp, skim from pan and as soon as it cools a little crumble it.

In about ¼ cup of the bacon fat in pan saute the sliced onions until transparent. DO NOT BROWN.

Into onions in pan stir the flour, salt and pepper until blended. Stir in evaporated milk or cream until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add 3 spoonfuls of mixture to beaten eggs. Stir egg mixture into creamed mixture in pan and stir until well blended. Remove from heat. Sprinkle crumbled bacon all over unbaked pie shell. Pour over onion and egg mixture. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 20 minutes or until set and slightly tinged with gold. Serve hot cut into wedges with a generous salad for a weekend lunch.

NICE GUYS GET IT IN NECK

TORONTO (CP) — A "nice" person often takes longer to recover from whiplash injury than does a grouch, a Vancouver doctor says.

Dr. W. G. Irvine says that "nice" persons "often have a habit of keeping the neck forward in an 'I'm a nice person, I never get angry' pose."

He says that this type of posture leads to a slower recovery from whiplash injuries.

He said that anger is related to jaw, neck and shoulder muscles. Persons who can't exress anger or can't reject demands made on them frequently suffer "jammed neck muscles."

Some Second Thoughts On Second Honeymoons

There are a few drawbacks to taking a second honeymoon.

While first honeymoons are taken by two completely malleable young people who could conceivably enjoy two weeks alone in a damp cave playing "This Little Piggie Went to Market," a second honeymoon is taken by two mature adults who have spent the past 15 years developing their own personalities — not to mention an aversion to having their toes touched.

To ensure absolute fairness, my husband and I usually compromise on places which neither of us likes. Last year we spent two weeks in a Victorian guesthouse, sleeping in lumpy twin beds under a sampler proclaiming "God Is Watching You."

In addition, there is always the problem of conversation. Although familiarity does not necessarily breed contempt, it does limit conversational possibilities. While newlyweds are pantingly eager to learn who, after all, they've married and spend days discovering that they both enjoy Brahms, Bill Cosby, and crisp bacon, a couple married 15 years already knows all this vital information and tend to spend hours simply staring at each other. If they speak at all, it's to debate the advisability of buying a new shower curtain.

"I think what we need is another second honeymoon," my husband announced last night. "I've just heard about this secluded romantic place called Lost Lake Lodge. Doesn't it sound great?"

"I'm not too crazy about the 'Lost' part," I said skeptically. "Where it is?"

"I'm telling you, it's perfect. We won't even have to talk. We'll just sit under a full moon, listening to the wind whisper love songs to the pines."

"It does sound good," I admitted. "But where is it?" Fortunately, before I packed my tennis racquet, bikini, and evening dress, he admitted that Lost Lake Lodge is a fly-in fishing camp up near the arctic Circle.

Wife's Boring Life

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are second-time-arounders. I have never seen such stability and tranquility in a marriage.

There is only one problem: I am bored stiff! When we dated, he took me out to dinner and to movies, and we had a great time, but now all he thinks of is work.

I carry his dinner to his office so he can work straight through. He eats in five minutes, thanks me, and goes back to work. When he comes home, it's bedtime, and he is too tired for anything but sleep.

He works all weekend. We never go out for dinner or to a movie anymore. He says it's too expensive, which is ridiculous because we can certainly afford it.

His health is fine. (He had the company doctor examine him, that way he didn't have to pay the bill.)

I am young and pretty and full of life, but I am lonely. He says if I want to see a movie I should go without him, but it's no fun going alone.

I can just see myself ten years from now getting a divorce. Can you help me? — Frustrated.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Fill in that communication gap with some straight talk. He's using his "work" as an excuse to isolate himself. Insist on counseling. And if he ducks that, you go alone. Your frustrations could lead to something worse than boredom.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote and asked you if you knew where she could buy a false fanny and you replied, "Send me your name and address and a stamped, addressed envelope and I will let you know."

Well I wasn't the person who wrote about it, but I sent my name and address and a stamped envelope making the same request, and you told me where I could order one.

Well, it came and I want to thank you, Abby. My clothes look a lot better on me, but here is my problem: Should I tell a guy (not as soon as I meet him, but after we get to know each other better) that I have a false fanny? I don't think it's fair to wear something fake without being honest about it. I mean, one day we might get to the point where he'll find out himself.

How should I handle this? — False Fanny.

DEAR FALSE: Don't wait until you get to that point. Just before you think he might find out himself, give him a little warning.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years, my sister has been writing me letters that are filled with nothing but her illnesses, the deaths of her friends (whom I don't even know) and any gossip about the family that is bad. She even rehashes the world situation, dwelling on the doom and gloom. After reading one of her letters I am so depressed I just sit and cry. I have written to her, asking her to please quit sending me such depressing letters, but it hasn't helped.

I don't want to sever our relationship completely, but I don't know how else to deal with her. I never write depressing letters to anyone. I am a happy-go-lucky person by nature, but could spread plenty of gloom if I wanted to.

I have tried not answering her letters, but she doesn't need a letter to answer. She writes once a week regardless. Please tell me what to do. — Another Day Ruined.

DEAR RUINED: If you want to let your sister know you mean business, return her letters unopened. She may be hurt and shocked, but I promise you, she'll not write many more depressing letters after that.

DEAR ABBY: A reader thought it would look "ridiculous" for a 47-year-old father to be best man at his son's wedding when the bride had selected a 21-year-old girl to be her maid of honor.

I wonder what that reader would have thought of this situation: When I was 14 years old, I was asked to be the godmother for my new-born cousin. The godfather was my 70-year-old grandfather. David's Godmother.

Is There a Beef Shortage —Or Are We Just Hogs?

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Is there really a shortage of beef in British Columbia?

Or do increasingly affluent consumers overeat beef?

Might it not be more efficient for people to consume directly more of the valuable proteins that are currently fed to cattle?

For example, the British Columbian who now expects to eat beef sausages at breakfast, hamburger at lunch and a roast at supper may not be aware of the amount of rich, humanly edible grain which went to fatten his cow.

Rising prices of beef are nothing new in other rich countries like Japan and France.

In Paris and Tokyo, beef's position at the top of the "food chain" is reflected in its position well at the top of the price list for protein-rich food.

It appears beef is headed the same way here, and soon only the comparatively well-off shopper will be able to afford the meat-rich diet which has for years been regarded as part of the North American heritage.

The answer to this situation may be for the individual to alter his or her diet—to eat some of the proteins that are now virtually wasted on cattle—and thus sidestep the whole meat-price issue.

This is the strategy argued by American nutritionist and ecologist Frances Moore Lappe in a new book: Diet For a Small Planet.

Lappe argues that North American beef and other meat livestock are actually a protein factory in reverse.

Vast amounts of cereal grains are fed to livestock which only produce 10 per cent of the original grain's protein in their meat at the butcher's shop.

Twenty million tons of protein were fed to U.S. livestock in 1968, for example, Lappe argues, producing only two millions tons of protein in the form of meat.

"Thus in a single year through this consumption pattern, 18 million tons of protein becomes inaccessible to man.

"This amount is equivalent to 90 per cent of the yearly world protein deficit—enough to provide 12 grams a day for every person in the world."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said in 1971 that: ". . . the billion people in the developed countries use practically as much cereals as feed to produce animal protein as the two billion people of the developing countries use as food."

At the same time, large numbers of people in North America—and British Columbia is no exception—are suffering from malnutrition.

Lappe argues that livestock can be efficient protein factories. The stomachs of ruminants like cows can produce protein on a non-protein diet. Such animals can convert poor land into rich soil by grazing on it for a few seasons.

It is the search for profit and fatty meat which prompts producers to pump rich feeds into their livestock.

Half the harvest in the U.S. each year goes to livestock.

Again, through their rich diet, meat-producing animals are at the top of long food chains in which pesticides accumulate as one organism is eaten by another.

"Thus as big fish eat smaller fish, or as cows eat grass (or fish meal or cereal grain), whatever pesticides they eat are largely retained and passed on.

"So man is eating at the 'top' of such food chains, he becomes the final consumer and thus the recipient of the highest concentration of pesticide residues," Lappe says.

Meat, fish and poultry, and to a lesser extent dairy products are shown by U.S. scientific research throughout the 1960s to be far ahead of grains, root vegetables, fruits, beans, oils and fats and leafy vegetables in DDT, DDE and TDE content.

An American currently eats roughly 75 times as much animal protein as an Asian, Lappe says. And much of that protein intake is not used for basic body sustenance, because after the body has received a certain needed quota of protein it uses the protein as a carbohydrate for simple body-heating: a costly fuel.

Lappe argues that well-paid North American consumers need much less animal protein than they currently eat.

And less well-paid consumers can get up to the levels they should have, not by trying to emulate their richer neighbors' meat-eating habits, but by turning to foods which are "lower" on the food chain.

This does not mean necessarily that everyone should become crank vegetarians overnight, Lappe argues.

But in the case of the wealthier consumer, a consideration of the real cost to the North American economy and the world food supply of excessive meat-eating will produce a desire to reduce meat consumption.

For poorer people, it will be a matter of necessity.

What then are the alternatives?

Lappe suggest diversifying the diet among a variety of vegetable and dairy products.

These products should be mixed in meals so that the various foods complement each other and offer the necessary levels of protein.

As in all ecological matters, variety is the spice of life.

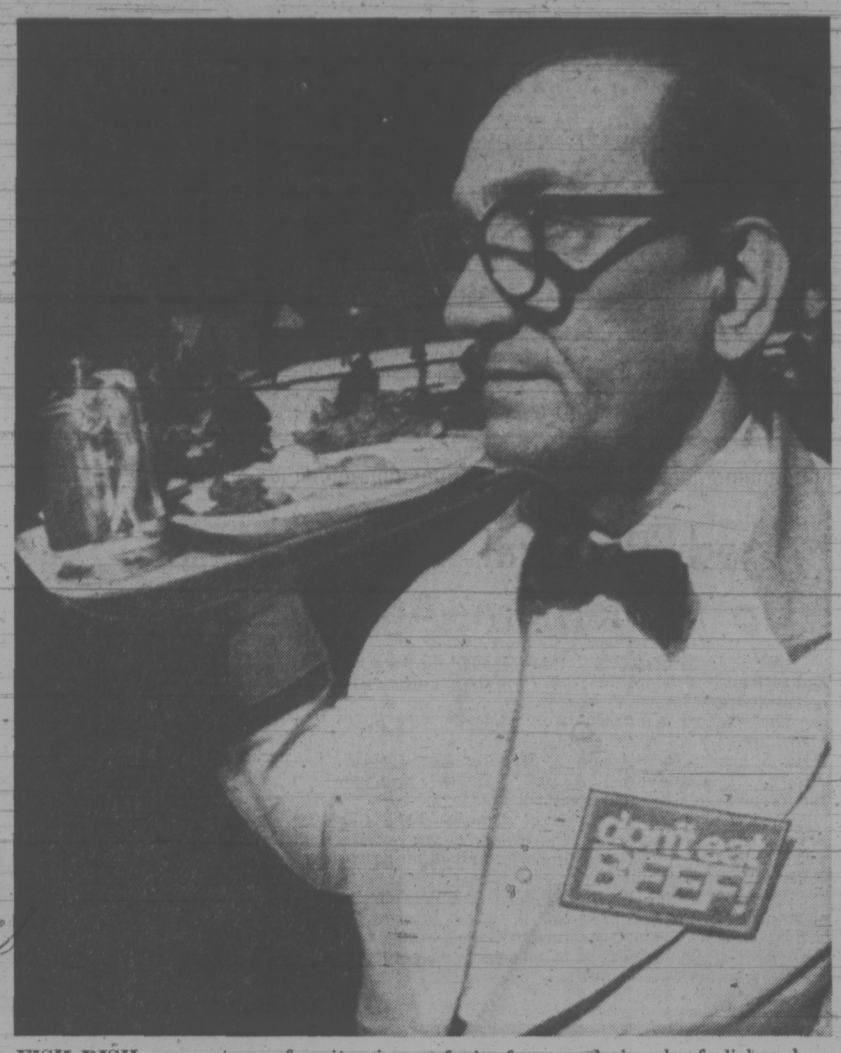
Lappe's proposed "lower on the food chain diet" diet calls for a wide range of meat alternatives.

The cheapest include dairy products like cottage cheese and buttermilk; dry seeds (legumes) like soybeans, black eye peas and split peas; grain products like whole wheat flour and oatmeal; seafoods like turbot and squid; additives such as wheatgerm and nuts and seeds like peanuts.

Cooks should become accustomed to using simple protein nutrition charts in the kitchen as commonly as they use a timer, Lappe says.

Diet becomes more varied, interesting, environmentally beneficial and—best of all—cheaper.

Vancouver butcher's sign is trifle misleading—he just can't keep figures up-to-date



FISH DISH graces tray of waiter in New York restaurant which has offered patrons a 10 per cent discount on main courses — if customers refrain from ordering beef dishes because of beef shortages and high prices leading to even higher mark-ups. Lapel badge speaks for itself.

Turning On With Sugar

By VIRGINIA NAEVE

From an article in Manas, a weekly journal of philosophy and psychology published in Los Angeles. The writer lives in North Hatley, Quebec.

We live and have a camp on a 140-acre farm. Our farm is four miles from the nearest small town. We swim in a lake about three miles from camp; there is a sandy beach and no pop stands — just woods.

Unless we go to something special for an outing, we are on the farm at all times and the children have no access to commercial products. We grow all our vegetables, most of the fruit, and raise all our meat and poultry. The things we purchase are gotten mostly from other farms and organic sources if possible.

I noticed that some of the children who had routine growing up problems like overweight, shyness, or pimples were the very ones who wouldn't eat most vegetables and sometimes fruit.

With all three children the parents did not know of the excessive sugar consumption, or, if they did, they didn't attribute it to the hyperactivity, sleeplessness, sluggishness, or the incoherent speech of that particular child.

At the end of camp when the parents came to take the children home, they noticed and asked how we got the boys to lose weight, the little girl to go to bed and sleep, and accomplished various other changes in their daily lives. We tried to tell these poarents what we had observed and why the camp had helped, and how our isolation from the main stream of commercial goodies made the problem stand out.

One parent told us how they kept sweet things out of the house because of the weight problem of one child. However, what they had not removed from access for the child was "small change" and a corner grocery nearby.

When I use the word "addict" in relation to sugar, it is for want of a better word to describe the effect that overconsumption of sugar and starches has on many children.

At camp, so long as good, wholesome food was eaten, a balance was achieved. But the moment the grandparents visited or sent candy as a present, a panic button was pressed.

At one point I was able to observe four meals uneaten after a large bag of candy was given to a child. Until her bag of candy was finished the child did not eat a proper meal.

As the sugar problem became clear we were sometimes able to remove the candy before it arrived in view. But at other times the candy got by and had its effect before we could do anything about it.

We usually take the children to a country fair each summer so that they can see all the breeds of animals and poultry. However, last summer we realized that we had this sugar problem and felt that the "Midway" at the fair would only aggravate it out of control. We thought of not going to the fair, or leaving the "addicted" kids (with me) and taking the rest, and so forth.

Finally we decided to go, with an adult taking charge of each one of these children and trying to keep the train on the tracks.

A former camper who had returned to help for two weeks offered to take the little girl with this problem. Since she was our youngest camper and a tiny little thing, the older ex-camper thought she would be manageable.

We had told the older girl about the sugar addiction, and to herself she may have thought we were "daft." But that evening she described what she had been amazed to see happen. Each child had been given a dollar for spending money. They could go on rides or get whatever they wanted. The idea was to encourage as many rides as possible so that there would be little change left for sugar stuff.

The little girl nagged, begged, wheedled and implored for candy, ice cream, cotton candy and whatever. In the end she bought a candied apple with her last quarter.

She took a bite of the candied apple and "turned on." She moaned, sighed, smacked her lips, and finally danced around the older camper ecstatically hugging her candied apple.

The older girl could not believe the change taking place before her eyes. The child had been obnoxious one moment, then pacified the next, once she had her sugar.

One of the boys with the sugar habit made no bones about his love of sugars and starches. He would wax almost poetic about the virtues of pancake syrup.

It wasn't hard to accept his love of sugar when you observed his breakfast bowl filled with syrup and the pancake drowned at the bottom, acting like a super blotter. When the other campers told him he was using too much syrup, he would just sit and stare at them and finally chuckle contentedly over his sweet.

I'm not sure I have conveyed a convincing case about these children. There are many small incidents I have forgotten, or could not put down on paper. What remains in my mind is the problem of mass advertising on TV and in magazines, the supermarket displays and the subtle or not-so-subtle general upping of the sugar content in many foods, all of which are mass-consumed by children and adults alike.

The problems this creates will not always be recognized for what they are, but I believe we can look forward to many more hyperactive children and adults who are really on sugar kicks.

A short time ago I came across an article, "Refined Sugars and Disease" — a compilation of studies by two American and two British doctors. Here I will only repeat some very shocking statements these doctors made about the everyday eating habits of many children. There are, for example, 3½ teaspoons of sugar in a small six-ounce soft drink; seven teaspoons of sugar in the average serving of ice cream; and 20 teaspoons of sugar in a four-ounce candy bar.

These four doctors made the suggestion that instead of refined sugar people use honey, sorghum, molasses or genuine maple syrup.

My conclusion is if with a small operation like ours we can have in one summer three of these children with unbalanced physical systems out of the 22 campers, how is society in general going to cope in the future with an increase, not decrease, of excessive refined sugar consumption?

As society drifts along on its sugary sweet cloud, our children are on a merry-go-round turning to music for which the words must be something like Love is sweet, sugar is sweet, sugar is love, and love is sugar-coated poptarts.

Prices Pinching Zoos, Too

CHICAGO (UPI) — Six hundred pounds of bananas a week would put a dent in the average homemaker's budget.

So would 700 pounds of meat, 100 pounds of horse liver and three tons of hay. But it's not at all unusual for a good-sized zoo like the one in Brookfield, Ill., near here, where skyrocketing prices are as hard on food buyers for animals as they are on food buyers for people.

"The only major difference is that we can't substitute or vary diets like the average consumer," says Dewey Garvey, commissary manager.

"Animal health and welfare is our top priority and the zoo will definitely not cut back on any animal diet," he said, noting that the cost of horse meat has doubled since January of this year and other foods are up 30 to 40 per cent.

The problem is nationwide, according to a survey taken by United Press International.

In Houston, for example, the vampire bats are out of beef blood because the packer who once supplied it shut down. The grower's waiting for the freeze on beef prices to be lifted Sept. 12 and stopped sending him cattle.

"If we can't use beef blood," said a spokesman, "we'll have to go back to using outdated blood from the hospitals."

The Los Angeles Zoo has had to stop feeding onions to its apes. "They love them like kids like candy," said a keeper. The cost of grain for hoofed species such as bears, antelopes and llamas has increased 30 per cent there.

In Washington, Moses Benson, commissary foreman at the National Zoological Park, said none of the animals under his care, including Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing, the giant pandas given the U.S. by China, have not been eating anything less or different because of the price hikes.

Some zoos have switched from raw foods such as horsemeat and fresh vegetables and grains to specially prepared "pellet foods," such as "supreme feline diet," which is processed horsemeat with chicken added.

"It's a complete ration for the wild cats," said Richard Naegeli, director of the Franklin Park Zoo in Boston and the Walter Stoneham Zoo in Stoneham, Mass. "Nutritionally, it's perfectly balanced . . . it jumped from $9 per 32-pound case to $10.92 per 32-pound case on June 1."

Other facilities, among them the Philadelphia Zoo, are not going along with the trend. "You have to feed a lion or tiger a good piece of meat," a spokesman said.

Naegeli said the prepared diets save money because there is less waste. Also, there is less fat.

At Lion Country Safari, a Laguna Hills, Calif., game preserve, the management tried feeding its 137 lions rock cod. They loved it. "Cats, after all, like fish," a spokesman said. It has not been maintained as a steady diet, however, because it does not provide enough protein.

The Philadelphia Zoo said meat, which cost $550 a week in March, now costs between $650 and $720. Other increases: oranges from $4.95 to $6.25 a box; mackeral steady at pound; apples from $5.95 to $6.90 a box; mackeral steady at 18c a pound. Carrots were down from $6.95 to $6.75 a bushel and crickets remained steady at a penny each.

Some zoos bolster the diets of their carnivores with surplus white rats raised for scientific experiments.

"We buy them at great discount, freeze them, and experience a good saving," said Lawrence Curtis of the Okalahoma City Zoo.

At the Bronx Zoo in New York, one of the nation's largest, a hydroponic garden is in the works. It is expected to produce fresher food with more vitamins and other nutritional benefits.

"We paid more than 20 per cent more for our food last year over 1971," said William Conway, general director. "Our animals aren't like human beings. They're completely defenceless in here. If it gets to the point where we can't take care of the animals any longer, the Bronx Zoo will just have to close down."

Chloe: Indiscretion Not What It Used to Be

By WAYNE HARDING
Times Staff

From Flaubert's Madame Bovary to Eric Robmer's new film Chloe in the Afternoon, it's been a long haul.

Indiscretion, of course, is such a time-honored subject in French literature and cinema, it's a bit presumptous to try to assess it — especially for an alien.

Still something seems to be missing these days.

The filmplay of Chloe in the Afternoon is about a young businessman who leaves his lovely, somewhat cool wife in the suburbs each morning to spend listless days in the city where he is amused more than tempted by opportunities to be naughty which the city offers.

Then one day Chloe, a girl from his past, returns to his life and he is indeed tempted.

Will he succumb to the charms of the lively, carefree creature?

It will take you nearly two hours to find out. In the meantime, you can watch the clever film technique or read the subtitles or brush up on your high school French or file your nails or wonder if you left the front porch light on.

Somehow indiscretion just isn't what it used to be. And Chloe in the Afternoon isn't worth the wait.

Also from France at the current Festival of International Film is To Die of Love by Andre Cayette.

It's the heart-tugger of the festival.

Clearly melodrama, the film relates the sad events that lead to the suicide of a sophisticated and sensitive woman who, in the name of freedom, refuses to renounce her love for a teenage boy, one of her students.

The story is based on real incidents — and Cayette won't let you forget it.

Anne Girardot as the teacher gives an outstanding performance. It is through her cunning as an actress that the role is retrieved from that oaf hopeless victim to that of a heroine.

Newspaper files have produced the stuff of a classic tragedy here. Cayette, who was also scriptwriter, has shown taste and caution in dealing with a story which could have gone wrong at any of a number of points.

The only obvious flaw — and one which the criteria of melodramas permits — is the lack of character development in the villains, here personified by the parents of the boy who are narrow and ignorant with redeeming qualities.

The message is an essay on freedom, a tragic one.

DEATH SQUADS ALLEGED

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (WP) — One of eight anti-war protesters on trial here on riot conspiracy charges told a government informer he was training "political assassination squads" on an isolated farm, the informer testified Monday.

William Lemmer, a former Arkansas VVAW leader, said he had seen the defendants demonstrate crossbows by firing metal-tipped arrows through eight inches of wood; use slingshots to propel smoke bombs at a house rented by a conservative organization; use slingshots to shoot "fried marbles," regular marbles and lead weights at tin cans and an abandoned refrigerator and shoot a Derringer into a stack of papers.

He also testified that alleged main co-conspirator Scott Camil had showed him "bolos" made out of lead weights and fishing line that he intended to use to trip horses being ridden by mounted policemen.

Lemmer is believed to be the key government witness in the case against the VVAW.

Defence attorneys have indicated they hope to discredit his testimony by pointing out what they say is a past history of mental disability and statements that Lemmer intended to bring "vengeance" upon the organization.

The eight defendants are accused of conspiracy to cause riots at the Republican convention in Miami last summer.

They have contended that the case is a Nixon administration attempt to justify the Watergate break-in and to discredit the VVAW.

Lemmer started his testimony with a history of his first contact with VVAW in early 1971, and moved quickly to his first meetings with Camil later that same year.

At one meeting, held in Kansas City, Camil told him about the political assassination squads that he intended to call "Phoenix II," Lemmer said.

"Persons associated, like myself, with a branch known as the Special Forces, were told they were the military right-hand of the CIA. In early 1960s, there was a project called Phoenix, calling for the assassination or the simple elimination of people that were said to be . . .(the) Communist cadre in South Vietnam," Lemmer said.

Lemmer said Camil told him his political assassination squads were being trained at a farm with facilities for "rifle, pistol and mortar practice."

The informer said further that Camil told him he was arming his squads by trading drugs for guns.

Defence attorneys moved for a mistrial when Lemmer gave his political assassination squad testimony, saying such squads were not discussed in the indictments and claiming his remarks were inflamatory and prejudicial.

Aged 'Physical Wreck' Up Matterhorn—Again

LOS ANGELES — Banker Stan Zundell, 61, flies today to Switzerland to attempt the record for the number of ascents of the Matterhorn by an amateur.

The southern California bank manager, who up to five years ago was a self-professed "physical wreck" with a history of heart seizures and a partially frozen spine, has climbed the Matterhorn five times — in fact, he made it to the top twice in a week last year.

Five years ago the Bank of America bank manager admits he fit the contemporary banker sterotype: Balding, puffy, a zealot for work and little else and suffering such executive ailments as ulcers and heart disease.

At age 56, with his health slipping fast, Zundell started a rigorous body-building program — as much mental conditioning as sprinting and swimming — and turned to mountain climbing classes after a friend's snide suggestion that he try to climb the Matterhorn.

WACO, Tex. — When an amateur burglar sobered up, he was appalled at what he had done. So he called police.

"I ought not to tell you this," he told Sgt. Floyd Kelinske, "but I can't keep it off my chest. I got drunk and stole some stuff last night."

Police went where he said and found the loot. The man did not give his name.

MADRID — A funeral mass for Fulgencio Batista, the former Cuban dictator overthrown by Fidel Castro, was sung in a small chapel today, attended by more than 100 Cuban exiles and family members.

Batista, 72, died of "acute circulatory collapse" — heart failure — Monday, his physician said. The former Cuban strongman died at a golf resort on Spain's southern Costa Del Sol where he had maintained a home — one of three in Spain and Portugal — since Castro seized power 13 years ago.

BIRMINGHAM, England — Sydney Sherwood got his last wish. His former secretary said the ashes of the oil lamp manufacturer were scattered on the floor of his factory — as he requested in his will.

"He made the request," said Miss Agnes Maguire, who help scattered the ashes, "because of his affection for the works, founded by his grandfather."

NEW YORK — Norman Mailer, sued for $6 million over his book on Marilyn Monroe, said Monday the suit sought to suppress literary criticism and was "not worth 60 cents."

Maurice Zolotow last week filed the suit against Mailer and his publisher, Grosset and Dunlap. He charged them with libel, invasion of privacy, interference with contractual relationships and inflicting "emotional distress."

According to the suit, Mailer lifted large parts of Zolotow's 1960 book, "Marilyn Monroe," for his own recently published book, "Marilyn."

'Overcharging' Oil Firms Hit

Major North American oil companies — "the most ruthless operators on the scene" — are charging too much for the petroleum products they sell within B.C., Premier Dave Barrett said Monday.

But the premier stopped short of saying he intends to proclaim legislation passed this spring which would allow the B.C. Energy Commission to control prices in B.C. of petroleum products.

Barrett said he is "very interested" in the action taken by the state of Florida recently, which charged 15 major U.S. oil companies with conspiring to contrive the fuel shortage in that country.

"There is a growing gap of credibility in British Columbia around the oil companies," Barrett said. "They are pleading poverty and the latest figures indicate some of the oil companies have never made more money in their history.

"I have a feeling that the oil companies are the most ruthless operators on the scene," the premier said. "It's obvious that their price structure is very similar. And when I see a state like the state of Florida, which is traditionally a very conservative state, go to the action that they have with their indictments, well naturally we're interested."

Barrett said he asked Attorney-General Alex Macdonald two weeks ago to request from Florida a copy of the indictments filed by the state against the companies so that provincial officials can study them.

Asked if he thinks oil companies in B.C. are charging too much fo their products, Barrett said: "Yes, I do. I certainly do." But when he was asked if he is considering proclaiming Section 4 of the Energy Act, which permits control by the B.C. Energy Commission of petroleum prices in B.C., Barrett said he is not "because I have no reason to proclaim it at this time."

The premier said he wants to prove his case about the oil companies before taking any action. "It's one thing to make statements and another thing to prove it. That's why we're asking for research material, that's why we're asking the Energy Board to do the back-up work," he said.

He described the position paper on energy released in the House of Commons by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald as "not a federal policy on energy . . . that's a bureaucrat's nightmare. We want a federal statement on energy conservation and we haven't got that.

Barrett said it remains to be seen "whether or not our Energy Board has enough teeth in it to avoid the kind of charges that Florida is making. Maybe they are applicable here. We just don't know."

The government will be waiting for recommendations on the matter from the Energy Commission, Barrett added.

$930,000 for Young

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will contribute $930,000 to the Commonwealth's new youth program over the next three years, it was announced Monday.

The program was approved in principle at a meeting of Commonwealth ministers concerned with youth matters earlier this year.

The program will have an awards scheme for teams of young people engaged in projects which further social, educational and economic development.

It also has provisions for Commonwealth centres for advanced studies in youth work, travel fellowships for researchers, bursaries to train youth workers and a youth information service.

Total estimated cost of the program over three years is $2.8 million. Canada will pay 30 per cent but is prepared to go to 40 per cent or $1.2 million, if other Commonwealth countries are unable to make up the requirements of the program.

Robbers Were U.K. Spies

LONDON (Reuter) — A political storm was brewing today over the latest revelation of British espionage activities in the Irish republic.

The defence ministry admitted in a statement Monday night that two English brothers, now serving prison sentences in Dublin for bank robbery, had been given the go-ahead to provide inside information on the Irish Republican Army.

But the statement said brothers Kenneth Littlejohn, 32, and Keith, 25, were warned that they could not expect any protection from the British government if caught doing anything illegal in the Irish republic.

The brothers said at their trial they were working for British intelligence and that a $168,000 armed bank robbery in Dublin in which they participated was part of a British plot to infiltrate and discredit the IRA.

The Opposition Labor party defence spokesman, Fred Peart, called for a full, independent inquiry into the affair.

SENTENCES IMPOSED

Kenneth Littlejohn was sentenced last week to 20 years in jail and Keith to 15 years for their part in the bank robbery last October.

The British statement said: "There is no truth in the allegation that the British authorities were, in any way, concerned with the bank raid in Dublin."

However, it admitted that Kenneth Littlejohn met by arrangement with then British defence undersecretary Geoffrey Johnson Smith.

"Because of what he had to say, the elder Littlejohn was then put in touch with the appropriate authorities."

It said that because of the elder Littlejohn's "known criminal record" the government was not authorizing or condoning any criminal activity in gathering information.

Therapeutic Hike on West Coast Trail

Young people bored with ordinary summer camps are being offered a more challenging alternative by child psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Ney.

For the past two summers Ney has been organizing hikes for groups of teenagers along the historic 45-mile West Coast Trail.

The entire trip takes 12 days, most of it spent on the trail and the rest on Ney's converted fishing boat, the 22-ton Nipentuck.

Mel Hoskyn, a music major from the University of British Columbia, and John King, a special counsellor with the Greater Victoria school district, are guides this summer.

The two groups who have made the trek this summer — a third is on the trail right now — consist largely of patients and former patients of Ney, he said.

"We try to make it really as challenging as possible for them," Hoskyn explained. "Object is to give the hikers a chance to test themselves, to extend their limits, in a way they never do in the city."

First few days are rough and many youngsters say they'd like to wring Ney's neck for talking them into going, said Hoskyn.

But once they reach the end of the 45-mile hike they feel good at having stuck it out, he added.

The hike requires a lot of co-operation among the group, said Hoskyn, and on the trail and around the evening campfires barriers come down.

One teen-ager didn't make it. He took an overdose of drugs on the trail and had to be flown out by helicopter.

It was "his way of copping out," said Hoskyn.

Mini-Crops Paying Off In Real Money Saved

Gardeners with patches of vegetables tucked into odd corners of the property may well feel a glow of satisfaction as they harvest extras for their meals to take the place of other foods out of sight on the price scale.

The past weekend was a kind of climax to all the thinking and planning that some of us have been concentrating on all year — to get more food crops growing on Vancouver Island.

Carefully tended plots are now producing bountifully, some gardeners already having surpluses to give to those without gardens. Green beans must be picked often and thoroughly to lengthen the season of producing. Lettuce do not keep in the ground once they reach full size, but fortunately they are usable over several weeks before reaching that peak. Summer squash also must be removed from the plants frequently to give others a chance to grow.

All these delicacies can be shared if you have a surplus.

A word of warning. Unless the friends you want to share your garden produce have been careful gardeners like yourself, it will pay to gather the surplus instead of telling them to "go ahead, help yourselves."

Non gardeners, or even some who say they are, have less respect for soil and plants than you. And some are not at all sure how to gather, pull or cut vegetables from the garden.

If possible, let them watch you while you gather. It may surprise them to see how carefully you handle the plants and treat the soil. You step carefully and as little as possible between the plants, keeping to well defined paths.

Apartment gardeners with their planters and tubs of vegetables are feeling rather smug too with their mini crops paying off in real money saved instead of only in flavor and the less tangible benefits.

For late, late starters — you can still prepare a patch of garden soil and sow a half dozen kinds of food plants to help bolster your fall and winter meals. Once you get the habit it grows on you.

Sow small rows of lettuce, an early cool season variety of the herb called chervil; it grows all winter, with small bright green ferny leaves for salads, soups, sandwiches.

Take a chance on a small row of green onions. They may give you flavoring in September and October.

Endive is a fine lettuce substitute standing cold weather. Sow it now, transplant the thinnings to give them space.

Swiss chard and Perpetual Spinach will grow if sown at once, and you'll have it right through to spring.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Quite often, an expert will fell a singleton king, and to the inexperienced kibitzer, the expert will be considered to be a real lucky fellow. But if one were to delve a little deeper into the matter, it would be observed that skill played a major role in the felling of the king. Today's deal is a case in point. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ A K Q 10
♡ A Q 4 2
◇ 9 7 3

WEST
♠ J 7 3
◇ K Q 10 5
♣ J 6 5 2

EAST
♠ 9 8 4 2
♡ K
◇ J 8 6

SOUTH
♡ J 10 7 6 5 3
◇ A 4 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

For those who might not approve of North's one-diamond opening bid, it should be stated that North-South belonged to the school that does not open four-card major suits in first or second position. Hence North had no option but to open the bidding in his three-card minor suit.

West's king-of-diamonds opening lead was captured by South's ace. With ten trumps headed by the A-Q-J, the proper out-of-context play is to finesse against the king. But, in this deal, the in-context correct play was to spurn the finesse — and our South declarer did just that.

At trick two he led his jack of trumps, and when West followed suit with the nine, dummy's ace was played. As is evident, the ace caught the king. The queen of trumps then picked up West's remaining trump, after which the ace, king, and queen of spades were cashed. With West's jack falling, South was able to discard both of his remaining diamonds on the board's spades. Thus he made 12 tricks, his only loser being a club.

The rationale behind South's refusal to take the trump finesse is easily understandable: if the trump finesse lost, South would go down, losing a trump trick, two diamonds, and a club. In playing the ace of trumps, declarer really didn't expect to catch the king. But in making his play, even if both opponents had followed suit with low hearts, only the king would be outstanding.

Thus the play of the ace was aimed at minimizing or eliminating the danger of one of the opponents trumping a spade while South was playing this suit to discard one of two of his diamonds. His reward — the "lucky" catching of the singleton king — was a deserved one.

Money Woes Split Commonwealth

OTTAWA (AP) — Discord Monday clouded Commonwealth summit talks on the world's trade and money woes after Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain rebuffed separate Australian and Indian calls for special action.

The 32-nation conference, at its halfway stage, faced the problem of concerting their approach to a series of international negotiations slated in the next few months.

Clashes marked the opening stages of the discussion Monday, and Britain, which joined the European Common Market Jan. 1, was at the centre.

Gough Whitlam, Australia's newly-elected Labor prime minister, called attention to the danger of multinational companies overriding the interests of national governments. They have a life of their own, he told his colleagues. The industries and output of a nominally developed country like Australia, he said, were controlled from overseas. This deprived the state of real control over its own economy.

Heath dismissed Whitlam's complaint as "economic nationalism" irking the burly Australian visibily, conference officials reported. The British leader then spoke of the Common Market's approach, which encouraged the free movement of capital across national frontiers and favored the liberalization of trade.

A second clash was over an Indian plea for Britain to press within the Common Market for a one-year extension of arrangements permitting Commonwealth countries to go on trading in the British market as in the past. This would mean continuation of preferences on both sides. Foreign Minister Swaram Singh said the Common Market had been tardy in negotiating new agreements that would allow countries like his own access to West European markets. Unless there was a time extension for adjustment, real hardship would result.

Heath's response was a blank no. The furthest he would go, he said, was to undertake to look at the problem when the current period of transition ended if, at that time, the affected Commonwealth lands still were in trouble.

In the welter of complex trading, tariff, money and other issues under discussion the plight of smaller, newer, developing lands seemed to be overlooked.

Prince Makohsini, prime minister of Swaziland in Southern Africa, voiced their dilemma: "We have lost all sense of direction. We are like a blind man in a dark room looking for a black cat which is not there. This is not surprising. There are in this field 10 elephants instead of two having a free-for-all." This seemed a reference to the Group of Ten of the world's rich, industrialized countries.

OSTLER SETS BAIL PRECEDENT

A charge of escaping lawful custody was quashed in a ruling Monday by provincial court Judge William Ostler that sets a national precedent.

The previously untested point of law — which arose from the 1972 Bail Reform Act — surfaced during the trial of Robert Gerald Langer, 30, charged with escaping Wilkinson Road provincial jail Feb. 6.

"The salient feature," said Ostler, "is that the accused was in custody not as a convicted criminal, but as an accused waiting trial.

"With passage of the Bail Reform Act Parliament has decreed detention prior to trial is exceptional . . .

"Whether that custody was lawful is the essential element to be proven by the crown."

Defence counsel Douglas McFarlane moved for dismissal of the charge last Thursday on a number of grounds including one that the crown had failed to prove the accused was in lawful custody.

"The charge is escaping, not from custody, but from lawful custody," said Ostler, Monday.

Under the Bail Reform Act a person in prison awaiting trial must appear before a higher court judge after 90 days in custody for a review of bail.

Langer was arrested Oct. 27 on a two-count charge of heroin conspiracy. Bail was refused and he remained in prison until Feb. 6, a total of 103 days.

"The crown failed to prove he was in lawful custody and the charge is dismissed," Ostler said.

Earlier, correction officials had testified Langer had returned to his cell after supper at 4:55 p.m. Feb. 6. At 7 p.m. the same day a bar was found cut out of a window on the third floor landing and Langer was missing.

He was found by RCMP in Clearwater, 70 miles north of Kamloops March 10. Langer was convicted in July of conspiracy to traffic heroin and possession of heroin for trafficking.

He was remanded to Sept. 5 for sentencing.

SECONDARY STUDENTS BACK COUNCIL PLAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A majority of British Columbia secondary school students appear to favor the creation of a province-wide organization of students.

Garfield Robinson, a spokesman for a seven-student committee — appointed by Education Commissioner John Bremer — studying the matter said Monday that at least 80 per cent of a representative 75 students interviewed by committee members in Sooke, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Victoria favor the concept.

Most favor the organization, and the province-wide student newspaper that would go with it, as a means "of representing them in the struggle for basic rights," said Robinson.

Other students, Robinson said, like the idea as a means of exchanging information on the conduct of school social events.

Groups of students are working towards forming locals in Victoria, Campbell River, Kamloops and Castlegar, Robinson said in an interview.

Transplant Off, Donor Still Alive

DENVER (UPI) — Four-year-old Jason Arthur Rae, pronounced dead and accepted as a transplant donor, was "breathing on his own" Monday.

The boy suffered a severe brain injury in a fall into a swimming pool July 14, and doctors at his Capistrano Beach, Calif., home decided he was dead. But his breathing was restored after 45 minutes.

His mother, Linda Rae, 28, gave permission for transplant operations at Denver, where he was flown for treatment Thursday because of his worsening condition. Doctors had planned to use his kidneys and liver for three other patients.

But they called off the surgery when he displayed responses to pain stimuli.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 57-year-old man was fined $50 for breach of probation by being convicted with two counts of impaired driving during three months probation for common assault April 26.

Walter Hanaka, address unknown, admitted in provincial court Monday he went drinking because "I was going crazy sitting around the house alone," after a disagreement with his wife.

Terry Reichenback, 20, of Fort Frazer, was fined a total of $325 for possession of hashish and having no car insurance when stopped by police in Mount Douglas Park Sunday.

For refusing to pay a taxicab fare of $1.90, Saturday, Ella Eitian, 21, of 2718 Rock Bay, was fined $35.

Gregory J. Danbrooke, 18, of 585 Heatherly, was fined $75 for possession of marijuana when stopped by police Sunday at Government and View.

A three-month probation term was ordered for Ricky Milne, 18, of 2682 Dowler, for possession of marijuana Aug. 3 at Fisgard and Quadra.

A 24-year-old Toronto man was fined $75 for possession of marijuana when stopped by police Sunday at Simcoe and Menzies. Wayne T. Regan told police it was "just some smoke."

A one-month prison term for possession of 51 caps of MDA was ordered for 18-year-old David Charles F. Smith, of 4408 Wilkinson Road.

Smith was stopped by police Nov. 7 at 1300-block Douglas.

GAS PACT RAPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government should oppose a new gas exports agreement between Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. and El Paso Natural Gas Co., B.C. Hydro said today.

Westcoast and El Paso have agreed to re-price present gas exports to the United States, to establish an $80 million drilling fund to find and commit new export reserves and to establish a small bonus on gas prices. The bonus would be dropped if additional exports were not obtained.

B.C. Hydro, in a brief presented today to the B.C. Energy Commission, says the agreement is "an inappropriate and complicating proposal for resolving current difficulties with natural gas prices."

The company also suggests the federal government be asked to levy an export tax, collected on behalf of B.C. and used to provide a public gas reserve.

MANILA (Reuter) — The Philippine government announced Monday the release of 147 persons detained under martial-law regulations. The announcement did not say how many more were in detention or the total number of releases so far.

Cowichan Gravel Clearing Soon

Work to clean out Cowichan River and prevent the possibility of a major flood will begin within a week, Communications Minister Robert Strachan has promised.

The Cowichan-Malahat MLA said the federal and provincial governments will work to clean-up a large gravel blockage in the river's main channel.

"Quick action will be taken to correct the situation. We will do our bit to clean-up the river before the fish will go up to spawn," Strachan said.

The 20,000 to 30,000 cubic yards of gravel washed down at last winter's flood poses the greatest flood threat ever experienced in the Cowichan Valley and in the front line of danger are at least 15 Indian families, most of which reside in the Klem Klem Altuz area.

Disturbance Forms

MIAMI (AP) — The National Hurricane Centre said Monday a tropical disturbance has developed 750 miles east of Trinidad in the Atlantic Ocean. Forecasters said the disturbance could develop into a tropical depression within a day.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

In the next ten years you'll pay about $180 too much to heat your water with oil.

(That's if oil prices don't go up. Again.)

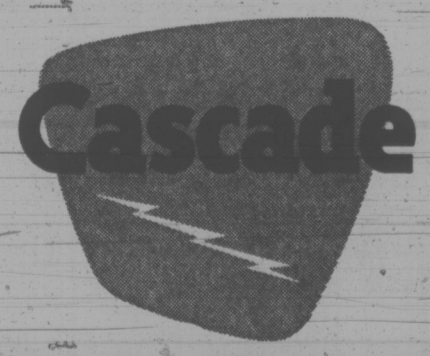
Or, you can switch to a Cascade electric water heater. First of all, you'll get all the hot water you need. Silently. Dependably. You won't have to fret about fuel delivery. Nor will you have reason to worry about environmental damage. Electricity is clean.

Best of all, on Vancouver Island it's the most economical way to heat water automatically. Compared to oil-fired units, the total cost of a Cascade electric water heater works out to approximately $18.00 less a year.* (In some areas you could save over $21.00 a year.*)

If you think $4.13 a month to rent an oil-fired water heater sounds pretty reasonable, consider this: you'll pay only $1.16 a month to own a Cascade, over the next ten years.* And that's more than reasonable.

Last of all, every Cascade unit carries a ten-year guarantee on the tank. If you wish, convenient financing can be arranged through B.C. Hydro. No matter how you add it all up, you get a lot more than hot water when you switch to Cascade.

*Based on operating conditions and calculations detailed in B.C. Hydro Technical Bulletin CWH 1-73, available at all B.C. Hydro offices.



Switch now! Offer expires Aug. 31!

Cascade 60 now $50 off! Reg. retail price.

This offer available through the following dealers until August 31, 1973 and is available on the replacement of a water heater in a residential home only.

90th YEAR, No. 50 ★★★ VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1973 15 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

M-B PROFIT SOARS

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today reported net earnings of $50,774,962 or $2.43 a share for the first six months of 1973, 136 per cent higher than the $21,539,962 earned in the same period of 1972.

The company's sales and other income for the six months ending June 30 amounted to $605,931,600, compared with $445,566,200 for the first half of 1972.

In its report to shareholders, the company said the increase in net earnings arose principally from greatly improved markets for all the company's products, especially lumber and plywood; favorable movement of the Canadian dollar relative to the U.S. dollar and the decrease in corporate income tax liability by about $3,800,000 due to the reduction in corporate tax rate applied to income of Canadian manufacturing and processing operations.

Mortgages Reach 10% As Bank Rate Hiked

Banks and trust companies began a new round of interest rate increases today with some firms raising their mortgage rates to 10 per cent.

The increases, which are expected to become general across Canada this week, follow an increase in the Bank of Canada's lending rate Monday night to 6.75 per cent from 6.25 per cent.

Banks today began raising their prime lending rate to large companies to 8.25 per cent from 7.75 per cent.

Conventional and National Housing Act mortgages were moving up to 10 per cent from 9.75 per cent.

There was pressure on the banks to raise their consumer loan interest rate to 12.5 per cent from 12 per cent, but there was no upward movement on these rates reported today.

One Victoria bank manager said it was customary to maintain a five per cent gap between prime loans and consumer loans.

"By that guide, the consumer rate should go to 13.25 per cent, but I expect it will rise only to about 12.5 per cent," he said.

Victoria bankers expressed concern that the federal government was about to step in and restrict the flow of money.

The supply was plentiful in Victoria and demand had been strong at the previous levels.

Several bankers said the tight money policies of 1969 could be only a matter of weeks away.

"Likely it would begin by the government directing banks to make as much money as possible available for mortgages and consumer loans and cut back on big loans to industry," a Victoria banker said.

"Then a general tight money policy would be not far behind."

The current round of rate increases were expected to be still below the peak.

Political opponents of the Trudeau government criticized the Bank of Canada's increase in interest rates today as "sad" and "disastrous," and a national consumers' spokesman said it will push rising living costs up even further.

"Very sad," said Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield. "The increase is going to move up rates on mortgages and make it more difficult for Canadians to get loans."

"I don't see how in heaven's name it can have any affect on reducing prices, certainly not food prices," said New Democrat Leader David Lewis.

"It seems as if the govern-

Gas Rips Homes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A series of violent explosions left at least six houses wrecked and 15 others on fire today when construction equipment ripped into a natural gas line in a subdivision in the city's west end.

Families were evacuated from the entire subdivision, an area about a mile square.

First reports were that three persons suffered minor injuries, but fire and police officials were uncertain of the exact injury toll.

Officials said the explosions began when a regulator valve on one street was ripped. Gas under high pressure was released into low pressure lines.

Within moments, the Richard B. Craig house blew up and two neighboring houses caught on fire.

Mrs. Robert Scott, whose house caught on fire, said she believed the Craig house was empty at the time of the explosion.

VIOLENCE RAKES CHILE

SANTIAGO (UPI) — A wave of terrorist violence swept Santiago and other sections of Chile today and the military took over law enforcement in the capital.

A gasoline pipeline was dynamited, homes and vehicles firebombed and rail tracks sabotaged in incidents linked to a series of walkouts that have crippled nationwide ground transportation for almost two weeks.

Wrong Target Again

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — U.S. warplanes in their second fatal bombing error in two days today hit a village little more than four miles from Neak Luong, the Mekong River town destroyed Monday by B-52s, Cambodian military sources said.

The U.S. embassy issued revised figures late today saying that 137 persons, including 56 soldiers, were killed in the Neak Luong bombing and another 268 persons, including 118 soldiers, were wounded. The Cambodians put the casualty toll higher.

The second bombing error came at the village of Koh Tachou, about 4.5 miles north of Neak Luong, and was carried out by F-111 swingwing fighter bombers. The Cambodians said four persons were killed and 25 wounded and that 17 houses were destroyed.

Meanwhile, in Washington, lawyers seeking a court order to make the U.S. immediately stop its bombing of Cambodia asked Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall Monday to reconsider his decision to let it continue.

RAIL UMPIRE NAMED

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today named Mr. Justice Alan Gold as an independent mediator in the dispute between the railways and their 56,000 non-operating workers.

Union leaders Monday announced a "second round" of rotating strikes — opening with a 42-hour walkout in Quebec — to continue "until we get a just settlement" after a fruitless attempt to resume negotiations.

Mr. Justice Gold is associate chief justice of the Quebec Superior Court in Montreal and an experienced labor mediator and arbitrator, especially in disputes involving longshoremen in the St. Lawrence River ports.

Munro told newsmen no deadline had been set for a settlement in the dispute before further action — including possible imposition of binding arbitration through emergency legislation by Parliament — was taken by the government. Nor had Mr. Justice Gold been given any specific instructions or ceilings on possible offers to the workers, Munro said.

Meanwhile, the second cycle of rotating strikes by non-operating railway employees resumed today with 18,000 workers walking out in Quebec province.

And, in Toronto about 60 employees at a CP Rail freight shed walked off the job protesting both union and company tactics during the rotating strikes.

Bob Copps, a spokesman for the workers, said they walked off the job halfway through their night shift because they feel the company is not seriously negotiating for a settlement.

Nixon Was 'Dumbfounded'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon was "dumbfounded" when told in mid-April of this year that his closest aides had been accused in the Watergate case, former attorney-general Richard G. Kleindienst said today.

Kleindienst told the Senate Watergate committee he first learned of accusations by White House counsel John Dean and Jeb Stuart Magruder, former Nixon campaign deputy, early in the morning of April 15.

He said he immediately sought a meeting with Nixon, and relayed the information to him early that afternoon in Nixon's office.

"He was dumbfounded, he was very upset," Kleindienst said.

Kleindienst said he (Kleindienst) also reacted emotionally to the accusations.

"Two of those men (former White House aide Robert Mardian and former attorney-general John Mitchell) were the closest friends I have ever had in my life," he said. "I think one of the things I did that night was I wept."

He said the affair saddened him more than anything since the death of his mother when he was a young boy.

He said Nixon consoled him in their meeting that afternoon, when Kleindienst laid out the charges.

today that for him to give Watergate investigators tapes of his White House conversations on the scandal would cause "severe and irreparable" damage to the presidency.

Meanwhile, Nixon argued He said he believed those guilty of criminal conduct could be brought to justice without the tapes, but that even if he were mistaken, the confidentiality of the presidency was more important.

The president's lawyers said in papers filed for Nixon in federal court that release of the tapes, as demanded by special Watergate prosecutor, Archibald Cox, would make the presidency subservient to the judicial branch of government.

The action came shortly after the Senate Watergate committee decided to postpone any legal action of its own to obtain tapes and related documents pending disclosure of Nixon's reply to the Cox subpoena.

The committee apparently decided to put off its lawsuit because of some concern that federal courts might refuse to accept the case on grounds that they lacked jurisdiction.

After Nixon's lawyers filed their opinion, U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica gave Cox until Monday, Aug. 13, to respond.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-president Spiro Agnew and two of his Maryland political associates are under federal investigation for possible violation of bribery, conspiracy and tax laws in connection with an alleged kickback scheme.

The investigation, sources said, involves alleged kickbacks to political figures in Baltimore county and other Maryland areas from engineering and architectural firms who have done business with the county.

Baltimore county surrounds Baltimore city on three sides and is where Agnew began his political career and the allegations apparently concern a period before Agnew became vice-president.

Agnew, late Monday, proclaimed his innocence. A statement issued by his office said:

"I have been informed that I am under investigation for possible violations of the criminal statutes. I will make no further comment until the investigation has been completed, other than to say that I am innocent of any wrongdoing, that I have confidence in the criminal justice system of the United States and that I am equally confident my innocence will be confirmed."

Other targets of the investigation, according to reliable sources, are two of Agnew's long-standing friends and important fund-raisers — J. Walter Jones, an Annapolis banker, and I. H. Hammerman, a Baltimore investment banker.

Hammerman and Jones served as Agnew fund-raisers when he ran for county executive in 1962 and for governor in 1966. Neither could be reached for comment Monday night.

Deputy presidential press secretary Gerald Warren said there would be no White House comment at this point.

Similarly, Attorney-General Elliot Richardson said through a spokesman Monday night that there would be no justice department comment at this time.

At the moment, specific details about the investigation are lacking.

But this much is clear: The second highest elected officer in the nation has joined the president under a cloud of suspicion. The investigation comes during the Watergate hearings and the consequent plummetting fortunes of the Republican party.

Agnew, who has frequently been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 1976, has thus far been untouched by the Watergate scandal. Now, however, his very acknowledgement that he is under investigation in another matter throws plans for 1976 out of kilter and the U.S. public has once again been treated to an overdose of the unexpected.

The investigation grew out of a federal grand jury probe which centred on Dale Anderson, one of Maryland's most powerful Democrats, who succeeded Agnew as Baltimore County Executive and still serves in the post.

Two months ago, William Fornoff, a former aide to both Agnew and Anderson, told the grand jury that since 1967 — when Anderson succeeded Agnew — he had funnelled cash kickbacks from several local contractors "to another official in Baltimore County."

Anderson publicly denied that he was the "other man" alluded to by Fornoff, but he later admitted at a closed-door meeting of his aides that he was under investigation by a federal grand jury.

During the seven-month investigation into Anderson's activities, several Baltimore County contractors have testified before the grand jury, and sources familiar with the probe have predicted that some contractors would be indicted.

One justice department source said Monday night that the legal immunity of an incumbent vice-president is not clear.

As an officer of the Senate, the source said, the vice-president enjoys certain constitutional immunities but it is not clear whether these immunities would cover crimes committed before becoming vice-president.

Loans For Poor

The British Columbia government may provide loans to low-income earners if the federal government does not move in this area before next spring, Premier Barrett said today.

Barrett, commenting on the fiscal policies of the federal government, said: "I am concerned about the high cost of money for low income people.

"This may be one area where the provincial government will move next spring."

Barrett said the provision of loans may require legislative action by the NDP government at next spring's session of the legislature. However, it could possibly be done entirely through budgetary provisions in the 1974 provincial budget, he said.

The premier would not elaborate.

NEW TAX AREAS

There will be no increases in corporate or personal income taxes when the British Columbia government brings in its budget next year, Premier Barrett said today.

However, he added, there will likely be new or increased taxation in other areas, possibly on the province's resources.

There will be no increase in personal income taxes "within the foreseeable future", he said, nor will the government be increasing business taxes "but we are looking at other areas."

Barrett made the comment at a news conference during which he defended his decision this year to increase corporate income tax to 12 per cent from 10 per cent because the province is currently going through a "boom year."

Don't Panic, B.C. Consumers Told

Don't panic.

That's the advice B.C.'s cabinet minister for consumer affairs, Phyllis Young, is giving meat buyers.

"It's fatuous to say pull in your belt, but just try to be judicious in purchasing," Young said today.

Panicking just drives prices up more, she said.

The crisis in meat prices is both a spill-over from the United States and the fault of the news media for "jumping on the situation."

"If there is an increase in the price at the processor or the retailer I just don't know and I don't know how to find out," she said.

The Prices Review Board in Ottawa should look into the industry, she said, and "if they find some hanky-panky" force the prices to go down.

"I've been keeping up with farm newspapers and I don't find the farmer getting any of this (price increase)," Young added.

The problem is definitely aggravated, she said, by a "freaky" weather situation all over the world and a series of circumstances causing shortages of feed.

Premier Barrett today urged consumers to boycott meat products until prices are lowered.

The premier said he agrees entirely with federal agriculture minister Eugene Whalen who, Barrett said, accused wholesalers of "gouging" public on meat sales.

"Don't buy meat," Barrett said. "That's the only way to do something about it."

Meanwhile the U.S. agriculture department today predicted grocery prices in the U.S. this year will average about 20 per cent above 1972.

If the increase over 1972 tops 21 per cent gain recorded in 1947, it would be the biggest one-year rise on record.

Department experts conceded that earlier hopes for a levelling off or decline in retail food prices in the last half of this year have now vanished and the best they can foresee for the rest of 1973 is a slower rate of increase than in the first half.

The Cost of Living Council announced today most of the administration's final Phase IV regulations and said firms will be able to raise some prices 10 per cent or more starting as early as next week.

In Toronto today, a Dominion Stores Ltd. spokesman

BARRETT BANS BUGS AFTER WATERGATE

Premier Barrett said today he has ordered one of his cabinet ministers to discontinue the tape-recording of the ministers' telephone conversations, in light of the Watergate Scandal in the U.S.

Barrett said the minister, Trade Minister Gary Lauk, had been using a telephone answering device to record his conversations for memorandum purposes. Lauk always advised his callers that they were being taped, however, the premier said.

"I don't consider this a bad practice," Barrett said, "but under the circumstances existing in North America these days, we decided that he should discontinue this."

Land Alive!

Dandelions Are Dandy, So's a Slug of Slugs

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Dandelion leaves are dandy when you're on the road.

The humble little weed that gets clobbered by ardent gardeners could be one of the best friends travelling youth can have as they take to the highways this summer.

When stomachs grumble and the budget's bent out of existence dandelion leaves combined with other natural foods could border on nectar.

The virtue of the dandelion is extolled in a voluminous tome which has taken local physician Dr. Joseph Haegert two years to complete.

Designed to help those who drop in at Cool Aid's free medical clinic, the book spells out how kids can remain hale and hearty even when there's no hamburger stand for miles.

Along with dandelion greens, Haegert suggests that stinging nettle tops, pigweed and strawberry leaves are rich with vitamin C. Rosehips, he says, are "extremely good".

Running out of tea is no problem, according to Haegert's manual. Make your own with some pine, black spruce or hemlock needles. Haegert also advocates the use of the pine's inner bark because it also contains sugar and starch.

Providing you're not too concerned about the esthetics or eye appeal even the lowliest creatures near the roadside can provide a main course.

A batch of beetles or slug of slugs or even grubs found in logs can provide that much-needed protein even if they don't exactly measure up to tenderloin as a tastebud tantalizer!

A Cool Aid worker, employed by the provincial parks department last summer, confirms that the doctor is right.

"The men I worked with told me that any insect is delicious when it's fried."

And, for a piece-de-resistance and less hunting time, try a palatable portion of garter snake.

Living off the land, though, presents its own particular brand of hazard in this technological age.

"Please be wary of roadside and B.C. Hydro right-of-ways," Haegert warns, "as well as railroads. They may well have been sprayed with herbicides that will fatally alter your digestive processes!"

For those whose stomachs become queasy at the thought of downing insects and other offerings as a regular diet, the doctor says powdered skim milk instant is the best source of dairy protein. Mixed with water several times a day, it will keep you going when you're too tired to cook or without means to make a fire.

Wheat germ is a great nutritional additive, says Haegert, as well as Brewer's yeast. Brewer's yeast becomes tasteless when mixed with other foods.

"But if you eat two and two-thirds of a cup of Brewer's yeast a day," says Haegert, "maybe you will get stopped for a breathalyzer test just walking down the street!"

Peanut butter, long the standby for mothers with small children, is recommended as a good source of protein and calories.

Haegert says sesame seeds are almost as good a buy.

"But at three-plus cups per day for a 154-pound man or woman," he observes, "you would probably end up tweeting like a bird."

For those who wander free as a bird and want to be sure they get sufficient vitamin D in their system the doctor has a final word of advice.

Go bare-back.

"The highest area of vitamin D production," he says, "in the body is the skin of the back. Let the sun shine in."

ON THE ROAD twosome may be miles from a hamburger stand but never far from edible greens augmented by backpack supplies of milk powder and sesame seeds. Hikers should beware of growth bordering hydro, rail and motor vehicle arteries—where toxic sprays and herbicides are often used. (Photo by Bill Halkett).

TWO YEARS of study by Dr. Joseph Haegert of Cool Aid's free medical clinic has produced a voluminous report stating that a skinny budget doesn't have to mean poor nutrition for youth on the move. Much nutrition — from spruce tea to grubs — is free for the taking, he says.

Curbs May Be Eased On 300-Acre Area

Consideration will be given to withdrawing special status from about 300 acres of Saanich just north of the university campus to permit new housing.

The land lying within the sewer enterprise, and now freed from the provincial freeze on potentially arable acreage, is bounded roughly by McKenzie, Arbutus, Finnerty and Gordon Head roads and was made a development area to protect it from multiple housing.

It is a mixture of lots and unsubdivided land restricted to half-acre minimum size. Planners will come up with a recommendation governing the type of subdivision most suitable.

W. J. Hess, of Delta, president of Cameo Development Ltd., seeks permission to proceed with subdivision of 14 acres with the area on Edgelow.

He said he had been led to believe six months ago by the municipality that a zoning amendment was being prepared to reduce minimum area requirements to 8,400 square feet.

Hess said he was aware of the special status but not that approval of his subdivision depended upon outcome of a meeting of the municipal planning committee and Saanich Advisory Planning Commission.

This meeting had not been held because of a lack of detailed information, explained committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring. He said it would be held soon.

He also said there had been considerable work load on the planning staff since Hess made his application, and the provincial land freeze had been in effect.

Council tabled Hess' letter at Monday's meeting.

When he was asked to speak Hess told aldermen he had expected to build about four houses per acre as early as March and he had been "led on" since then. He could not wait much longer, he said.

Mayor Hugh Curtis expressed concern a developer had been "led on" in the belief that council was about to reduce zoning requirements.

Waring said the development area was declared in the "hysteria of townhouse development" on Grodon Head Road, thereby preventing further commercial and multiple density dwellings.

Hospital Merger 'Excellent Idea'

The chairman of the capital regional hospital board said today he favors asking directors at Victoria's two general hospitals and doctors how they feel about centralizing their hospital organizations.

Art Young was commenting on views expressed by John Forrester, the region's new director of hospital planning, in a Times story Monday.

Forrester suggested that a single board of directors for both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals and a single medical staff would make it easier to develop complementary roles for the two hospitals.

Each has its own board and active medical staff now although most doctors on the active staff at one hospital have admitting privileges at the other as well.

Young said he personally thought the single board and medical staff concept is "an excellent idea" and he would like to see the matter pursued.

He is in favor of asking the board of directors at each hospital and the Victoria Medical Society, which represents the doctors, for their reaction to the idea.

If a single board did come about, it would be important it was not so large as to prove cumbersome, he added.

Breakthrough Likely In Stadium Financing

Esquimalt is prepared for the first time to accept its share of financing operating costs at Centennial Stadium at the University of Victoria, Mayor Art Young said today.

"I will be recommending that Esquimalt accept its share, and I think it will" said Young, commenting on a decision by Oak Bay council to approve a financing proposal by the university stadium committee.

Combined municipal share of 1973-74 operating costs will be $17,428, of which Esquimalt will be expected to contribute about $1,600.

Oak Bay will pay $2,169.79.

Victoria is studying rejection of cost sharing and urges a "more appropriate instrument for cost-sharing" in the Capital Regional District, said Mayor Peter Pollen.

Although Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt were all partners in construction of the stadium in 1967, Esquimalt never shared in the operating costs administered by the joint university - municipal commmittee.

Victoria has been reluctant, Pollen said, because the city pays more than any other municipality for parks and recreation facilities enjoyed by the whole community.

"But even then we're saying we should contribute," Pollen said.

Saanich has not dealt with the proposal yet.

The proposal recommends:

—Payment to be made by users in ratio to the amount of use, based on a unity value of $26 per unit for 1973-1974.

—City and municipal grants to subsidize public use and a portion of organized sport use not covered by increased rental charges.

—The University of Victoria to relinquish its right to receive rental income from stadium rentals.

—The university to pay all of the "fixed costs", estimated to be $9,687 for the year 1973-1974.

—In addition, the university to pay unit rental costs of $26 per unit for its use of the stadium.

—The school districts to be requested to make annual operating grants compensating for use by respective district.

—First-time provision to be made for a fund to finance future major repairs and replacements.

INTERIM TOURIST BUREAU PROPOSED

Establishment of an interim tourist bureau for Victoria is recommended in a report to be sent to city council this week.

Ald. Bill Tindall, who prepared the report, said today the interim bureau should take over when the present Greater Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau closes at the end of September.

The interim bureau should operate until the beginning of 1974, he said, while a steering committee works out plans for a new permanent tourist bureau.

"It certainly will not be on the same scale that the bureau operated on in the past," he said of the new bureau.

He has recommended that the new bureau confine its activities to providing information for tourists once they are here, not with advertising or attracting tourists to Victoria.

Frampton Mad; Won't Run Again

Miffed by the fact his "abilities are not being utilized" veteran alderman Percy Frampton said today he is quitting politics at the end of his current term.

Frampton said he is "damned sure" Mayor Peter Pollen will be glad to hear he's not running again.

He's been an alderman for the past eight years.

"I've done everything the mayor has asked me to do without exception," he said.

He is at present chairman of the fire prevention, health and welfare committee.

Frampton said his training as an accountant and his experience in the field of recreation are not being used by council.

KILLER WHALES IN PEDDER PEN

Two killer whales, captured by a Sealand crew at dusk Monday, appear to be in good shape at Pedder Bay today.

One is thought to be a bull about 8,000-10,000 pounds and approximately 22 feet long. It is unconfirmed, but the other whale is thought to be a cow and is smaller.

Sealand president Bob Wright said it is almost certain the bull will be released later in order that whale census officials may continue monitoring the bull in its natural habitat.

Fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill, was on hand today to check on the whales.

Wright has a special permit from the fisheries department allowing him to catch up to six whales.

Permits are issued only to those wanting whales for scientific purposes or display in marinas.

At the moment permits are free but the department is considering charging for them.

COWICHAN CURBS FACING ANGLERS

Sports fishermen will be restricted in their angling activities at Cowichan Bay this weekend.

Due to a heavy concentration of young chinook salmon at the mouth of the Cowichan River and an anticipated heavy influx of fishermen competing in the $25,000 B.C. Salmon Derby on Saturday and Sunday, federal fisheries officials announced today the western derby boundary would apply to all fishermen.

This boundary runs from southern tip of Genoa Bay to the Wilcuma Lodge wharf and eliminates angling in a large part of the bay.

Money Still Seen Prime Motivator

Management should beware of psychologists who claim money is not a prime motivator, a leading management consultant told delegates to the Western Pension Conference which opened Monday at the Empress.

Richard A. Stull, vice-president of an international management consultants firm and lecturer on management at the University of California, said personnel managers who claim money ranks low on workers' priority lists are "a pimple on the behind of progress."

Money may not matter if you have a rich wife but for the average worker with a young family to educate money is still one of the prime motivators, Stull said.

"Money makes everything grow," he said. "and the same psychologists who specialize in downgrading money as a motivator are charging more every day for their lectures."

The conference is for directors of pension plans, insurance company officials, bankers, attorneys and actuaries working with pension programs. It continues today and Wednesday at the Empress.

Stull said there is an urgent need for companies to explain benefits to their employees. "The insurance companies understand the benefits in pension plans but the workers don't."

He said pension programs could not fulfill the function of motivating workers unless the employees understood the benefits.

Stull said a recent U.S. study showed 85 per cent of employees surveyed felt they needed more information about their benefits under the company program.

He defined motivation as "a means of getting someone to do something you want him to do because he wants to do it."

"You can't control things without controlling people." However, management is hampered by the fact that motivation differs for each individual employee.

All behavior is instigated by needs and directed towards objectives, Stull said, but there is no way of knowing what a person will do.

"There is no way of measuring motivation. Management can only observe what employees do and try to figure out their motivation on that basis," he added.

Inquiry Set In Death Of Tot

Victoria coroner Edmond St. Jorre will conduct an inquiry into the death of a 16-month-old Saanich boy killed outside his home Sunday, a Saanich police spokesman said today.

Police believe Nathan Richard Thyne, of 90 Sims, was struck by a car or a truck at 6 p.m., Sunday, but can't establish what vehicle hit him. There were several in the area at the time, police said.

The boy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital by his father, William Thyne, 25, and was pronounced dead at 8:40 p.m.

Police said no charges are pending in the incident.

Mortgages Reach 10% As Bank Rate Hiked

Banks and trust companies began a new round of interest rate increases today with some firms raising their mortgage rates to 10 per cent.

The increases, which are expected to become general across Canada this week, follow an increase in the Bank of Canada's lending rate Monday night to 6.75 per cent from 6.25 per cent.

Banks today began raising their prime lending rate to large companies to 8.25 per cent from 7.75 per cent.

Conventional and National Housing Act mortgages were moving up to 10 per cent from 9.75 per cent.

There was pressure on the banks to raise their consumer loan interest rate to 12.5 per cent from 12 per cent, but there was no upward movement on these rates reported today.

One Victoria bank manager said it was customary to maintain a five per cent gap between prime loans and consumer loans.

"By that guide, the consumer rate should go to 13.25 per cent, but I expect it will rise only to about 12.5 per cent," he said.

Victoria bankers expressed concern that the federal government was about to step in and restrict the flow of money.

The supply was plentiful in Victoria and demand had been strong at the previous levels.

Several bankers said the tight money policies of 1969 could be only a matter of weeks away.

"Likely it would begin by the government directing banks to make as much money as possible available for mortgages and consumer loans and cut back on big loans to industry," a Victoria banker said.

"Then a general tight money policy would be not far behind."

The current round of rate increases were expected to be still below the peak.

Political opponents of the Trudeau government criticized the Bank of Canada's increase in interest rates today as "sad" and "disastrous," and a national consumers' spokesman said it will push rising living costs up even further.

"Very sad," said Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield. "The increase is going to move up rates on mortgages and make it more difficult for Canadians to get loans."

"I don't see how in heaven's name it can have any affect on reducing prices, certainly not food prices," said New Democrat Leader David Lewis.

"It seems as if the govern-

M-B PROFIT SOARS

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today reported net earnings of $50,774,962 or $2.43 a share for the first six months of 1973, 136 per cent higher than the $21,539,962 earned in the same period of 1972.

The company's sales and other income for the six months ending June 30 amounted to $605,931,600, compared with $445,566,200 for the first half of 1972.

In its report to shareholders, the company said the increase in net earnings arose principally from greatly improved markets for all the company's products, especially lumber and plywood; favorable movement of the Canadian dollar relative to the U.S. dollar and the decrease in corporate income tax liability by about $3,890,000 due to the reduction in corporate tax rate applied to income of Canadian manufacturing and processing operations.

Gas Rips Homes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A series of violent explosions left at least six houses wrecked and 15 others on fire today when construction equipment ripped into a natural gas line in a subdivision in the city's west end.

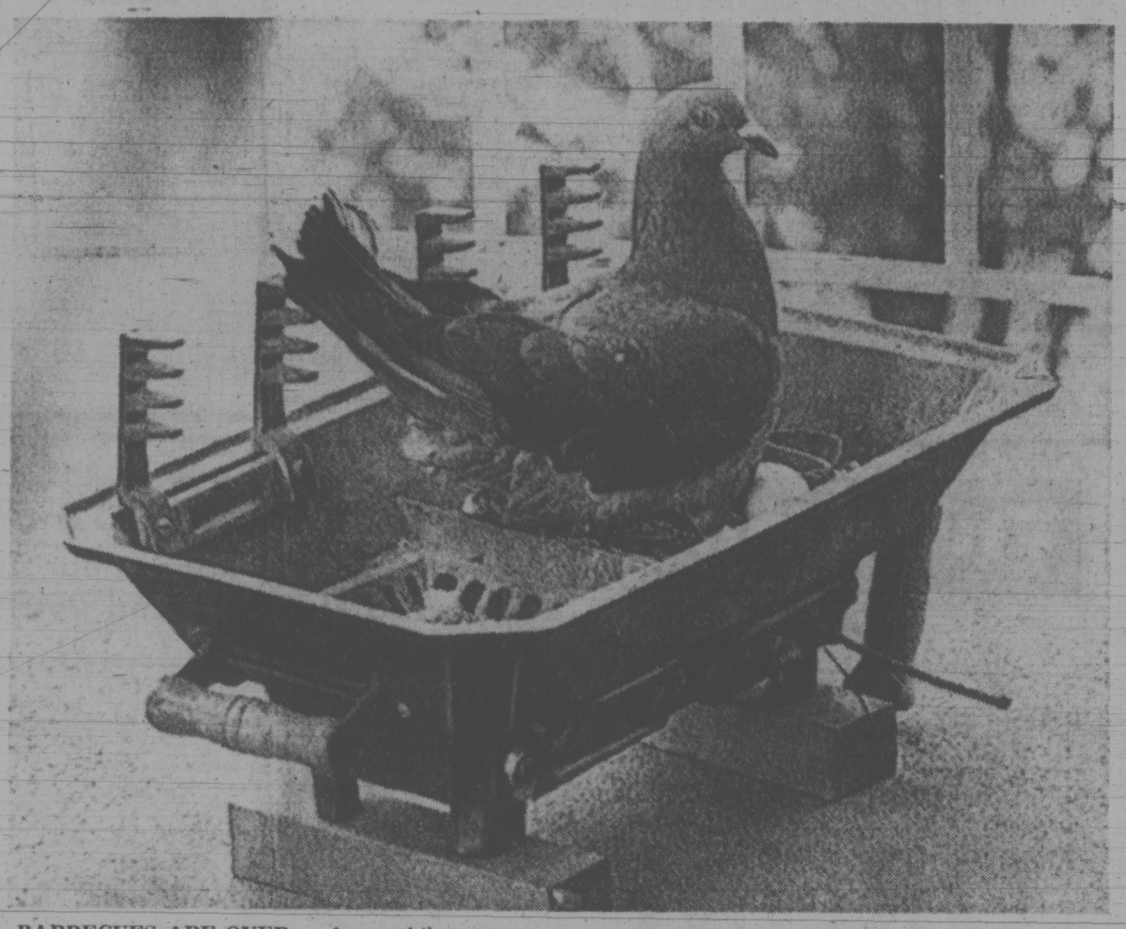
Families were evacuated from the entire subdivision, an area about a mile square.

First reports were that three persons suffered minor injuries, but fire and police officials were uncertain of the exact injury toll.

Officials said the explosions began when a regulator valve on one street was ripped. Gas under high pressure was released into low pressure lines.

Within moments, the Richard B. Craig house blew up and two neighboring houses caught on fire.

Mrs. Robert Scott, whose house caught on fire, said she believed the Craig house was empty at the time of the explosion.



BARBECUES ARE OVER — for a while, anyway — for Alex Wardrope of Vancouver after this pigeon decided the cosiest place to raise a brood was in his hibachi on the sixth-floor apartment.

VIOLENCE RAKES CHILE

SANTIAGO (UPI) — A wave of terrorist violence swept Santiago and other sections of Chile today and the military took over law enforcement in the capital.

A gasoline pipeline was dynamited, homes and vehicles firebombed and rail tracks sabotaged in incidents linked to a series of walkouts that have crippled nationwide ground transportation for almost two weeks.

Wrong Target Again

PHNOM PENH — U.S. warplanes in their second fatal bombing error in two days today hit a village little more than four miles from Neak Luong, the Mekong River town destroyed Monday by B-52s, Cambodian military sources said.

The U.S. embassy issued revised figures late today saying that 137 persons, including 56 soldiers, were killed in the Neak Luong bombing and another 268 persons, including 118 soldiers, were wounded. The Cambodians put the casualty toll higher.

The second bombing error came at the village of Koh Tachou, about 4.5 miles north of Neak Luong, and was carried out by F-111 swingwing fighter bombers. The Cambodians said four persons were killed and 25 wounded and that 17 houses were destroyed.

Meanwhile, in Washington, lawyers seeking a court order to make the U.S. immediately stop its bombing of Cambodia asked Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall Monday to reconsider his decision to let it continue.

RAIL UMPIRE NAMED

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Labor Minister John Munro today named Mr. Justice Alan Gold as an independent mediator in the dispute between the railways and their 56,000 non-operating workers.

Union leaders Monday announced a "second round" of rotating strikes — opening with a 42-hour walkout in Quebec — to continue "until we get a just settlement" after a fruitless attempt to resume negotiations.

Mr. Justice Gold is associate chief justice of the Quebec Superior Court in Montreal and an experienced labor mediator and arbitrator, especially in disputes involving longshoremen in the St. Lawrence River ports.

Munro told newsmen no deadline had been set for a settlement in the dispute before further action — including possible imposition of binding arbitration through emergency legislation by Parliament — was taken by the government. Nor had Mr. Justice Gold been given any specific instructions or ceilings on possible offers to the workers, Munro said.

Meanwhile, the second cycle of rotating strikes by non-operating railway employees resumed today with 18,000 workers walking out in Quebec province.

And, in Toronto about 60 employees at a CP Rail freight shed walked off the job protesting both union and company tactics during the rotating strikes.

Bob Copps, a spokesman for the workers, said they walked off the job halfway through their night shift because they feel the company is not seriously negotiating for a settlement.

Agnew Bribe Probe

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-president Spiro Agnew and two of his Maryland political associates are under federal investigation for possible violation of bribery, conspiracy and tax laws in connection with an alleged kickback scheme.

The investigation, sources said, involves alleged kickbacks to political figures in Baltimore county and other Maryland areas from engineering and architectural firms who have done business with the county.

Baltimore county surrounds Baltimore city on three sides and is where Agnew began his political career and the allegations apparently concern a period before Agnew became vice-president.

Agnew, late Monday, proclaimed his innocence. A statement issued by his office said:

"I have been informed that I am under investigation for possible violations of the criminal statutes. I will make no further comment until the investigation has been completed, other than to say that I am innocent of any wrongdoing, that I have confidence in the criminal justice system of the United States and that I am equally confident my innocence will be confirmed."

Other targets of the investigation, according to reliable sources, are two of Agnew's long-standing friends and important fund-raisers — J. Walter Jones, an Annapolis banker, and I. H. Hammerman, a Baltimore investment banker.

Hammerman and Jones served as Agnew fund-raisers when he ran for county executive in 1962 and for governor in 1966. Neither could be reached for comment Monday night.

Deputy presidential press secretary Gerald Warren said there would be no White House comment at this point.

Similarly, Attorney-General Elliot Richardson said through a spokesman Monday night that there would be no justice department comment at this time.

At the moment, specific details about the investigation are lacking.

But this much is clear: The second highest elected officer in the nation has joined the president under a cloud of suspicion. The investigation comes during the Watergate hearings and the consequent plummetting fortunes of the Republican party.

Agnew, who has frequently been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 1976, has thus far been untouched by the Watergate scandal. Now, however, his very acknowledgement that he is under investigation in another matter throws plans for 1976 out of kilter and the U.S. public has once again been treated to an overdose of the unexpected.

The investigation grew out of a federal grand jury probe which centred on Dale Anderson, one of Maryland's most powerful Democrats, who succeeded Agnew as Baltimore County Executive and still serves in the post.

Two months ago, William Fornoff, a former aide to both Agnew and Anderson, told the grand jury that since 1967 — when Anderson succeeded Agnew — he had funnelled cash kickbacks from several local contractors "to another official in Baltimore County."

Anderson publicly denied that he was the "'other man" alluded to by Fornoff, but he later admitted at a closed-door meeting of his aides that he was under investigation by a federal grand jury.

During the seven-month investigation into Anderson's activities, several Baltimore County contractors have testified before the grand jury, and sources familiar with the probe have predicted that some contractors would be indicted.

One justice department source said Monday night that the legal immunity of an incumbent vice-president is not clear.

As an officer of the Senate, the source said, the vice-president enjoys certain constitutional immunities but it is not clear whether these immunities would cover crimes committed before becoming vice-president.

Nixon 'Dumbfounded'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon was "dumbfounded" when told in mid-April of this year that his closest aides had been accused in the Watergate case, former attorney-general Richard G. Kleindienst said today.

Kleindienst told the Senate Watergate committee he first learned of accusations by White House counsel John Dean and Jeb Stuart Magruder, former Nixon campaign deputy, early in the morning of April 15.

He said he immediately sought a meeting with Nixon, and relayed the information to him early that afternoon in Nixon's office.

"He was dumbfounded, he was very upset," Kleindienst said.

Kleindienst said he (Kleindienst) also reacted emotionally to the accusations.

"Two of those men (former White House aide Robert Mardian and former attorney-general John Mitchell) were the closest friends I have ever had in my life," he said. "I think one of the things I did that night was, I wept."

He said the affair saddened him more than anything since the death of his mother when he was a young boy.

He said Nixon consoled him in their meeting that afternoon, when Kleindienst laid out the charges.

Meanwhile, Nixon argued today that for him to give Watergate investigators tapes of his White House conversations on the scandal would cause "severe and irreparable" damage to the presidency.

He said he believed those guilty of criminal conduct could be brought to justice without the tapes, but that even if he were mistaken, the confidentiality of the presidency was more important.

The president's lawyers said in papers filed for Nixon in federal court that release of the tapes, as demanded by special Watergate prosecutor, Archibald Cox, would make the presidency subservient to the judicial branch of government.

The action came shortly after the Senate Watergate committee decided to postpone any legal action of its own to obtain tapes and related documents pending disclosure of Nixon's reply to the Cox subpoena.

The committee apparently decided to put off its lawsuit because of some concern that federal courts might refuse to accept the case on grounds that they lacked jurisdiction.

After Nixon's lawyers filed their opinion, U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica gave Cox until Monday, Aug. 13, to respond.

Loans For Poor

The British Columbia government may provide loans to low-income earners if the federal government does not move in this area before next spring, Premier Barrett said today.

Barrett, commenting on the fiscal policies of the federal government, said: "I am concerned about the high cost of money for low income people.

"This may be one area where the provincial government will move next spring."

Barrett said the provision of loans may require legislative action by the NDP government at next spring's session of the legislature. However, it could possibly be done entirely through budgetary provisions in the 1974 provincial budget, he said.

The premier would not elaborate.

NEW TAX AREAS

There will be no increases in corporate or personal income taxes when the British Columbia government brings in its budget next year, Premier Barrett said today.

However, he added, there will likely be new or increased taxation in other areas, possibly on the province's resources.

There will be no increase in personal income taxes "within the foreseeable future", he said, nor will the government be increasing business taxes "but we are looking at other areas."

Barrett made the comment at a news conference during which he defended his decision this year to increase corporate income tax to 12 per cent from 10 per cent because the province is currently going through a "boom year."

Don't Panic, B.C. Consumers Told

Don't panic.

That's the advice B.C.'s cabinet minister for consumer affairs, Phyllis Young, is giving meat buyers.

"It's fatuous to say pull in your belt, but just try to be judicious in purchasing," Young said today.

Panicking just drives prices up more, she said.

The crisis in meat prices is both a spill-over from the United States and the fault of the news media for "jumping on the situation."

"If the price increase is at the processor or the retailer level I just don't know and I don't know how to find out," she said.

The Prices Review Board in Ottawa should look into the industry, she said, and "if they find some hanky-panky" force the prices to go down.

"I've been keeping up with farm newspapers and I don't find the farmer getting any of this (price increase)," Young added.

The problem is definitely aggravated, she said, by a "freaky" weather situation all over the world and a series of circumstances causing shortages of feed.

Premier Barrett today urged consumers to boycott meat products until prices are lowered.

The premier said he agrees entirely with federal agriculture minister Eugene Whalen who, Barrett said, accused wholesalers of "gouging" public on meat sales.

"Don't buy meat," Barrett said. "That's the only way to do something about it."

Meanwhile the U.S. agriculture department today predicted grocery prices in the U.S. this year will average about 20 per cent above 1972.

If the increase over 1972 tops 21 per cent gain recorded in 1947, it would be the biggest one-year rise on record.

Department experts conceded that earlier hopes for a levelling off or decline in retail food prices in the last half of this year have now vanished and the best they can foresee for the rest of 1973 is a slower rate of increase than in the first half.

The Cost of Living Council announced today most of the administration's final Phase IV regulations and said firms will be able to raise some prices 10 per cent or more starting as early as next week.

BARRETT BANS BUGS AFTER WATERGATE

Premier Barrett said today he has ordered one of his cabinet ministers to discontinue the tape-recording of the minister's telephone conversations, in light of the Watergate scandal in the U.S.

Barrett said the minister, Trade Minister Gary Lauk, had been using a telephone answering device to record his conversations for memorandum purposes. Lauk always advised his callers that they were being taped, however, the premier said.

"I don't consider this a bad practice," Barrett said, "but under the circumstances existing in North America these days, we decided that he should discontinue this."
